The Yeoman.

The man who stands upon his own soil . who feels that by the laws of the land in which he lives-by the laws of civilized mations...-he is the rightful and exclusive owner of the land which he tills, is, by the constitution of our nature, under a wholesome influence not easily imbibed from any other source.

He feels, other things being equalmore strongly than another, the character o fman, as the lord of the inanimate world. Of this great and wonderful spere which, fashioned by the hand of God, and upheld by his power, is rolling trough the heaven's a portion is his ;-- his from the centre to the sky. It is the space on which the generation before him moved in its round of duties ; and he feels himself connected by a visible link, with those who preceds ed him, as he is also, to those who will follow him, and to whom he is to transmit a home. Perhaps his farm has come down to him from his fathers .-- They have gone to their last home; but he can trace their footsteps over the daily scene of his labors. The roof which shelters him, was reared by those to whom he owes his being.--Some interesting domestic tradition is connected with every enclosure. The favorite fruit tree was planted by his father's hand. keep constantly on pand and make to order, all kinds of HARNESS, SADDLES, He sported in his boyhood, by the side of the brook which still winds through his meadow. Through that field lies the path to the village school of his earliest days .--He still hears from the window, the voice of the sabbath bell, which called his father and his forefathers to the house of God; and near at hand is the spot where he laid his parents down to rest, and where he trusts, when his hour is come, he shall be dutifully laid, by his children. These are the feelings of the owner of the soil. Words cannot paint them + gold cannot buy them -they flow out of the deepest fountains of the heart; -- they are the life-spring of fresh, healthy generous national character. -Edward Everett.

Care of Fresh Ment.

Fresh meat should be carefully examined comes in, and if flies have blown upon it, the part must be cut off. This should be daily observed until it is dressed, as not only tends to preserve the meat long in perfectes perceived in the outer slice, when sistant The prices will be as follows: brought to the table.

In the country where the meat is often carried a great distance, it should be well covered with a cloth, over which fresh cabbage leaves would keep it cool. The cautions are more needful, as in some families great loss is sustained by the spoiling of meat. The fly may, in some measure, be prevented by dusting, upon the parts most likely to be attacked, pepper and ginger mixed, after wiping, which should never be omitted.

serve it from purification, and recover him with their custom. His stangements are what is spoiling. All legs and shoulders of meat should hang with the knuckle downward, which will cause the gravy to be retained.-Valley Farmer.

Peeling and Boiling Potatoes .-- A loss of the most nutritious portion of the pots toe is incurred by peeling off the rind and parts directly underneath, as in these the nitrogenized matters, but no starch, chiefly reside, which are dissolved by cold water and congulated by water while boiling. If potstoes, therefore, are thrown into cold water, and gradually heated, much of their nitrogenized principles will be extracted before the water reaches the point of ebullition; whereas, if it be made to boil before they are introduced, the congulation will cause these matters to be retained within the tissue of the vegetables lyingcontiguous to the rind.
