Election Proclamation. WHEREAS, by the laws of this Commonwealth, it is the duty of the Sheriff of every county to give notice of the general election...

The Democrat Saturday Morning, Oct. 10, 1857

The Pennsylvania Election.

The election in Pennsylvania for State officers is close at hand; and the democratic party, who have the honor of the State in their hands, are working with their characteristic zeal and determination.

will be ignominiously beaten. We say ignominiously beaten—for David Wilmot to buy nothing support, basely stultified principles which for a life time he had defended.

We look, then, for glorious tidings from Pennsylvania; and because its patriotic voters will not allow themselves to be drawn into a war on the constitution of their country by the election of Wilmot.

Charles R. Buckalew.

On the 30th ult., the Senatorial Conference, after numerous ballots, nominated the Hon. Charles R. Buckalew for Senator for this district, composed of the counties of Northumberland, Snyder, Columbia and Montour.

Hon. C. R. Buckalew.

It will prove gratifying intelligence to the Democracy, throughout the State, that this distinguished gentleman who has conducted the present gubernatorial canvass, in so able and efficient a manner, has been re-nominated by his constituents.

Re-Nominated.

We rejoice very much to know that Hon. C. R. Buckalew, of Columbia county, has been re-nominated as a candidate for State Senator in his district.

The Westfall Argus has the following, which is not only a good joke, but a fact:

"The best political joke we have heard this season was 'done' on the occasion of 'King' David Wilmot's speech at Erie. An Irishman who had listened attentively to him, finally turned to a friend and inquired, 'An' that's David Wilmot, eh?'

"Gloomy Prospects."

The Tribune says the prospects in Kansas are "gloomy." No doubt. The free-State men having resolved to vote, black republicanism in the North is likely to be a bankrupt quite before election day comes off.

Cut and Tie.

Democrats in whose hands the tickets have been placed, will confer a favor upon their party and facilitate the voting on election day by carefully cutting, folding and tying up the whole ticket.

THE REV. C. S. BURNETT, while laboring as a Missionary in Southern Asia, and during a tour to the Mountains of the Himalayas, contracted the disease, and died on the 10th of August, 1857.

Senator Douglas, by an Oppositor Paper.

The following sketch of Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, by the editor of a Republican paper, the Newburyport (Mass.) Herald, is graphic and amusing.

The little man, with a big, round head, a brow almost as broad as Webster's, and a quick, active eye, that rolls under a heavy, projecting brow, watching every other man, and not allowing a motion to escape him—was not short for his body, which is full and round, as though it never lacked the juices that supply life;

Mr. Buckalew has been in the State Senate six years, and for the last three years has been considered the leading man in that body.

The Causes of Suicide.

In France, in 1851, according to the Westminster Review, there were 3599 cases of self-destruction. Of these, 963 are set down as resulting from insanity, and 166 from "fixed melancholy," which should be classed, we think, as a species of insanity.

But he is greater still in energy of character. There are those who think that a defeat of him next year would be his death in pallies; but the man who sprung from a cabinet maker's shop in Vermont, and without father or friend worked his way to an honorable place upon the bench of judges, who entered Illinois with less than fifteen cents in money and not one cent in credit, and has acquired great wealth and the highest station and influence, is not easily to be whipped out.

A Man shot by a young Lady.

On Wednesday night last a distressing accident occurred at the residence of Mr. George Smith, in Charles City county, near the Henrico eastern line, which resulted in the death of a worthy young man, and in great anguish to two families at least.

Again the lady is approached with a fair word and a bland smile, and goes home pleased to tell her husband or father how he looks and what he says, and then half a dozen are about him, all standing together. He can talk religion with the priest as well as politics with the statesman; he can congratulate the newly appointed office holder, who has supplanted his friend, tell the displeased friend of the "good time coming," when his wing shall be up; and at every station, more regularly than the conductor, Mr. Douglas is upon the platform, with a good bye to the leaving, and a welcome to the departing traveler—a shake of the hand with one man that stands at the depot, and the touch of a hat to another.

Now such a man as that, in contact with everybody, knowing everybody, and capable of pleasing every one, at the bottom wrapped up with the one idea of preference, power, and dominion among men, is not easily to be put down; and his opponents might as well believe at once, that when they fight him they fight a strong man—a little giant indeed.

He would be popular in Boston or anywhere else, and half the "three thousand elegments" he deplored would have their hearts stolen if he could speak to them a half hour.

Peace in Kansas.

The war of factions, on the Kansas question, is confined to those outside of Kansas. The people of the Territory are deeply interested—in their homes, in their household goods—that there shall be a permanent and a perpetual peace in Kansas.

The people were absorbed in business and other pursuits more enuring than politics; and it was only when our informants returned to the States that they found the real Kansas war. A few days, however, will settle the matter, and we shall then be able to tell how far these prognostications are well-founded or not.

The Silence of an Arctic Night.

The following eloquent description of the silence of an Arctic night occurs in Dr. Hays' lecture on the Arctic regions. We have, at least upon one occasion, when eight or nine miles under ground in the Mammoth Cave, seemed to feel the darkness, but we never imagined that other negative attribute of nature, silence, could be so intense as to be heard.

I have often, to escape from the trying monotony of ship-board life, gone off six or eight miles into the interior in search of novelty and in order that I might be alone. Then, seated upon a rock or snow-bank, I look around me, and see a great, uneven country—rocky hills and glaciers covered with snow; myriads of crystal gems sparkling in the light of the pale moon, which shoots its rays down through the crisp air, making it almost as light as day. I look seaward, and see a long plain of ice, melting into the horizon, dotted all over with huge, towering bergs—nothing more, all nature is in the repose of death. I am too far from the shore to hear the crunching of the ice as they rise and fall lazily with the tide, or the roar like distant thunder as some huge crack opens through the heavy floes.

TO MY WIFE.

[The following exquisite love song is the composition of Joseph Brennan, a young Irishman, one of the exiles of 1848, who died recently of consumption in New Orleans, at the age of 25. Nothing could be more beautiful than this ballad—which ought to be set to music, since only the voice of the "sweet singer" can do justice to its tender pathos and passion.]

Come to me, dearest, I'm lonely without thee, Thy eyes are my stars and my heaven above, Thy smile is my joy and my life's true love, Thy hand is my guide and my strength to prove.

When you are gone I'll find the dearest sign, In every breeze that blows from the shore, I'll hear thy voice in the rustling of the pine, And in the sighing of the waves that roar.

When you are gone I'll find the dearest sign, In every breeze that blows from the shore, I'll hear thy voice in the rustling of the pine, And in the sighing of the waves that roar.

When you are gone I'll find the dearest sign, In every breeze that blows from the shore, I'll hear thy voice in the rustling of the pine, And in the sighing of the waves that roar.
