

Agricultural.

PANS OF MILK.—The Connecticut Homestead republishes from an old Genesee Farmer, an account of three carefully conducted experiments for the purpose of determining whether more butter is obtained from a given quantity of milk when set in pans partly filled than when full. Contrary to the expectations of the experimenter, from the same quantity of milk in the full pans, some three or four per cent. more butter was obtained than when set in pans half full.

SETTING OUT TREES.—The time for planting is in the fall, when the leaves fall from the forest—say from the 20th of October to the 20th of November. Trees procured in the fall, may be kept safely for planting in the spring, by burying them half their length in sandy earth, in a sloping position, where no water is liable to stand; and for peach or cherry trees, a slight covering of brush, or forest leaves, over the tops will be of service, in case the winter should prove severe. Small bushes like currants, gooseberries, raspberries, grapes, &c., may be buried entire in earth, if taken up in the fall, and not planted before spring. Trees planted in the fall should have the earth bilged up around the stems six inches or more in height, and pressed firmly with the foot, to hold the trees in position during the winter, and protect the roots somewhat from frost and excess of wet. It is also protection against injury by mice.

SUGAR BEET FOR CALVES.—"The best calves I ever raised," said a farmer the other day to the agricultural editor of the N. Y. Tribune, "I raised in this way: Just as soon as they would eat, and that was very early, for the young ones learned of the older ones, I gave them just as many sugar beets as they would eat. I cut them up in thin slices, with a veracious appetite, and grow fat and sleek as moles. I have no doubt other beets would be nearly as good, and so would carrots, parsnips, and even turnips, for early spring feeding, before grass comes."—This fact is mentioned now, that farmers may save some of their roots, if they leave them, to feed the calves with in the spring.

KEEPING WINTER SQUASHES.—There is just this simple rule for keeping winter squashes: Put them in a warm, dry place, and they will not rot. It is a warm, damp atmosphere, like that in most cellars, that causes decay. A dry stove-room, or furnace-heated room, which never gets cold, or a closet near the fire-place, which never gets cool enough to freeze, are good places in which to winter the squashes and pumpkins. They also keep well hung up in baskets or bags overhead in the kitchen, or on a hanging shelf.—They should always be stored singly—never in piles—when you wish to preserve them a long time.—[We copy this from the N. Y. Tribune, and it is no doubt correct. We have found that our cellar, the temperature of which is kept up by a heater from 45 to 60 throughout the winter, is equally well adapted. We have kept pumpkins, (which is means by the work squash used above,) for one year.—Ed.]

HOW TO LEARN TO FARM WELL.—I am a disbeliever in anything like instinctive knowledge. If you wish to learn how a thing should be done, do it; if you wish to know the result, observe it. If you were to ask me how I should teach a young man to farm, the only answer I could give you would be, I would give him great opportunities of learning.—Now I would venture to say, especially to my young hearers, if you wish to be a successful agriculturist, learn your business thoroughly, and set about it in the right way. If you wish to be a good and prosperous farmer, pay attention to little things, and however high a position you may hereafter attain, or however eminent you will never repeat of the time and attention you have bestowed upon the rudiments of your calling; and allow me, as an old man, who has had many opportunities of observing his own, as well as his neighbors' shortcomings, to tell you what I consider constitutes a good man of business—attention to details. If any of the young gentlemen who are doing me the honor to listen to my remarks were to ask me for a motto for their guide to business, I would give them these three words, "attention to details." Great things will generally be looked after, but the whole are overlooked or forgotten.—Correspondent of the Prairie Farmer.

WORMS IN HORSES.—The Irish Farmers Gazette says: The best remedy for worms in horses is to give a strong ball, composed of 6 to 7 drachms Barbadoes aloes, according to size, first preparing the horse with a few bran meals. There can be no difficulty in giving the ball with a person accustomed to do so. A good remedy also is to give about a wineglassful of spirits of turpentine, mixed in a pint of warm water, and a pound of molasses or soft sugar.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hardly Realized.
It is a well known fact that the farmer, and the stock raiser, are not only the most industrious, but the most successful, who are the most successful in the world.
