The Protestant Episcopal Convention at Burlington, N. J , refused by a vote of 68 to 8 to take up a resolution on the "State of the Country." Considering themselves as strict y an eclesiastical body. they thought it more consonant with their character as christians, to decline the discussion and adoption of resolutions, having even a quasi political character; than to turn a religious Convention into a political meeting. We venture to say that the members of the Convention separated with more of the feeling of "Peace on earth and good will towards men," than if they had been heated by a political discussion.

In the Pennsylvania Convention no attempt to introduce any other except proper and regular religious and Diocesan business was made.
