THE VALUE OF INDIAN CORN.

By those who do not know, or are too scientific to profit by the experience of nations of men and herds of fat cattle-Indian corn, rice, buckwheat, &c. are only considered good fodder. Liebig states that if we were subject to the same degree of cold as the Somieles, we would be able to consume the half of a calf and a dozen candles at a single meal. During excessive fatigue in low temperature, wheat flour fails to sustain the system. This is owing to a deficiency in the elements necessary to sapply animal heat ; and the strong desire for oleaginous substances under these circumstances has led to the belief that animal food is necessary to human support .---But late scientific expeaiments have led to better acquaintance with the habits of the North American Indians, and show that vegetable oil answers the same purpose as ; animal food ; that one pound of parched Indian corn, or an equal quantity of corn meal made into bread, is more than equiv. BOOT AND SHOEMAKING. alent to two pounds of fat ment.

Meal from Indian corn contains more than four times as much olenginous matter as wheat flour ; more starch, and is sugar, though less gluten; in other import. exchange for work. consequently capable of producing more ant compounds it contains nearly as much mounshurg, July C. 1981-200. B. P. BROOKS. nitrogenous material. The combination of alimentary compounds in Indian corn ren-ders it alone the mized diet capable of sus taining man under extraordinary circum-stances. In it there is natural coalescence of elementary principles which constitute the basis of organtic life, that exists in no other vegetable production. In ultimate composition, in nutritious properties, in digestibility, and in its adaption to the various necessities of animal life in the different climates of the earth, corn meal is capable of supplying more than the absolute want of the adult human system than any other single substance in nature.

The above article, we clip from the Massachusetts Plowman, contains important information in regard to the value of Iudian corn. It should be borne in mind, however, that the different varieties of corn vary materially in regard to the most important qualities. Some varieties are nearly or quite destitute of gluten, oil, or the salts of iron, all important constituents in the mixed diet referred to by Baron Liebig. The Tuscarora and the White Flour-Corn are examples of ihis character, being composed chiefly of starch. They make a nice white meal, which may be made into excelsent bread; and on account of portant qualities. Some varieties are the greater softness of the grain are considered by some better food for horses than the more flinty varieties.

The commonly received opinion is that yellow corn contains most oil. While this is generally true, it is not invariably so. The color of corn often depends on the epidermis or hull, and sometimos on the oil. the latter is not always yellow. The es and fewelry, and all work warranted. Rhode Island White Flint corn contains Homesburg, May 4, 1951-tf. an abundance of transparent colorless off which can easily be seen through the clear pellacid hulls. All the flinty varieties of corn contains a considerable quantity of oil. The Canada corn, or Eight-Rowed Yellow, contains more than any other variety, ex-cept the Rice corn and Pop corn. the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitu-tions not only suffer from scrofulous cons-plaints, but they have far loss power to with-stand the attacks of other diseases; conse-quently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which de-cimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or destructive discases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cruss. One quarter of all our people are scroftlous ; their persons are invaded by this lurking in-fection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must renovate the blood by an alterative medicine, and in-vigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in
