The Work Goes Bravely On. Now, by St Paul, the work goes gravely on—the tide of success is with the Federal forces, and Maj. Gen. McClellan is working out the salvation of the country—Colombia Dessorate.

Yes, the work does go "bravely on," desired 'tide of success' was lacking. That essential was action.

And that too, when the telegraph has informed us that McClellan sat at one end of the wire, conducting the operations in the west under Halleck and Foote; and was also in constant intercourse with Fortress Monroe, and the naval expedition. On this very subject a dispatch from Washington says:

"In their efforts to disparage General McClellan, the radicals are continually committing egregious blunders and outraging history. The order books of the ommanding General, and the commandants of the several departments, contain a complete history of the origin of all the plans of the campaign, and point unmistakably to their author. The efforts to confer this honor, first on General Fremont, then Geneval Halleck, then General Grant, and lastly upon Flag Officer Foote. are all equally as vain as the effort of Mr. Shanks in the House to attribute to Gen. Fremont the idea of employing gunbonts on the Western waters. Unfortunately for Mr. Shnaks' argument, these gunboats were ordered and advertised for before Gen. Fremont returned home from Europe, and the construction of three of them was actually begun before he to k command of the Department of the West. The facts show campaign were all projected while Gen. McClellan was commanding the whole Department of the West, which then included Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri.
