COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT.

John G. Freeze, Local Editor.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1862.

WARRENTON JUNCTION, Va., April 30, 1862.

My Dear Sir:—"All is quiet on the Rappahannock." I know this, because I have just returned from a reconnoisance extending from Rappahannock Station to Fredericksburg. A party of us consisting of Capt. Matthews, Lieut. Conover of Gen. Abercombrie's Staff, and 20 cavalry left this place about 10 o'clock on Monday last, and proceeded along the Railroad to the river for the purpose of reconcitering. We found the village of Rappahannock entirely deserted, and from some contrabands learned that the day after our former reconnoisance, the enemy left their fortifications and had not been in them since. We also learned that the object of their moving so many guns to the right during the cannonading, was to protect a bridge they had just constructed, and over which they feared we would cross. During the night they burned it.

After a brief consultation we concluded to seek adventures further down the river. We proceeded a few miles, when feeling the inconvenience of hunger, stopped at the old Stone Mansion for the purpose of recruiting our inner selves, and feeding the horses. The proprietor evidently considered us unwelcome visitors; but dared not refuse us. Hot corn, bread milk, greens, and boiled ham constituted the bulk of the meal. I may hear mention that this "sacred soil" is unusually prolific in garlic, which impregnates the milk and butter to such an extent that none but old campaigners can relish them. The host was somewhat astonished at our profer of pay, and his eyes gleamed brightly as they caught the lustre of U. S. gold, to which, for some time, he has been a stranger.

The first ford is at Kelleyville, a small village on the opposite side, but the river was too high to enable us to cross in safety. Near this place a series of locks have been built to enable the boats to get around the rapids. We had lost the main road some miles back, and therefore were obliged to pick our way among unfrequented paths, which, in several instances, were obstructed with gates and fences. We were also in a region never before traversed by our soldiers, and did not know what moment a body of the enemy might attack us.—The country is thinly inhabited. On seeing us the children would scamper away in mortal terror, and even staid women became frightened. At one place we inquired of a partially deaf old woman if any soldiers were in the vicinity. "Soldiers!" exclaimed she, "I never saw any, unless you are such." We reached the main road twenty miles from Fredericksburg. It was in a miserable condition, and is nearly impassible for artillery.—Our small force of cavalry could scarcely avoid the numerous "chuck holes." The soil is mostly quicksand. At one point I noticed that those before me sank some distance in the mud, and in order to avoid it I turned to what appeared to be firmer ground. My horse immediately sank to his neck in the sloggh, and it was with difficulty that I dismounted and got him out. Had it been ordinary mud I would not have cared so much, but it was greasy slimy, and had all the adhesiveness of Aunt Jemima's world renowned plaster. It would not even dry; but stick to me like the little old man did to Sinbad. If other "sacred" things would only stick to me as did that "sacred soil," I would have been a Bishop long ago.

Darkness overtook us at the usual hour for its appearance, but in nowise befriended us except in hiding our meddled condition from beholders, and plunging us into new (or rather old) mudholes. About 10 o'clock we came in sight of the picket fires of our advanced guard. Here it was necessary to proceed with much caution or some over-jealous picket might introduce an improved method of ventilation into our decaying bodies by means of a bullet. Capt. Matthews and myself were in advance of the main body, and were halted by a picket. We were making the proper explanations when we discovered that they were the redoubtable "Bucktails," with whom we had so much to do in old Camp Curtin. At this moment our cavalry came jingling along, and the men jumped up and grasped their rifles expecting it to be a ruse. We assured them that all was right, and they sent us under guard down to Gen. Reynold's Head Quarters. To him we made the proper explanations, and were allowed to pass through the lines. We reached Falmouth about 10½ o'clock, and there halted. Lieut. Conover and myself went to Gen. Augur's Head Quarters, and were hospitably received. He much wondered at our temerity in coming so far with so small a force, and stated that our arrival saved him the necessity of sending a force along up the river. Our men were quartered for the night in a ware house, and a floor in the Provost Marshall's formed our luxurious couch.

The next morning by special invitation we took breakfast with Gen. Augur, after which we looked around for "sights."—Falmouth we found to be an old village, apparently commenced in a hurry and suddenly broken off. It was connected with Fredericksburg on the opposite side by two bridges besides the Railroad bridge. All had been destroyed previous to the entry of our troops. The railroad runs from Acquia Creek on the Potomac to Richmond, and so far as I could learn is entire after crossing the river. Richmond is almost due South, and only 60 miles distant, so that we were much nearer to it than McClellan. Fredericksburg is not occupied by our troops as is reported; but lies entirely at our mercy, the guns on the east side commanding the place. The inhabitants have formally given it up, and state that "they desire to be treated with the consideration due to captured cities in modern warfare." Our troops do not occupy it, because, strategically speaking, it is of no consequence. It is an old, irregular city, and reputed to be wealthy, though the most of the inhabitants have left. The river is navigable to this point. Our troops occasionally straggle over in boats, but are careful to return before night. Many "contrabands" escape to this side, but are a continual annoyance, and fare much worse than if they remained with their masters. While at General Augur's Head Quarters, I saw a scene well calculated to move the heart of pity. Three women came up with twelve children tagging at their heels. They seemed to be of all ages from a few months to 12 years. All were barefooted and raggedly clad. The day previous they had walked 20 miles, and had neither shelter nor food. The feet of poor little blacks were so sore they could scarcely stand on them. All the food the General could give them was hard crackers; but what was this for small children? They wished to go to Alexandria or Washington. We asked one of the women where her husband was? She replied that "Mass'r was sick and he would not leave him." Is not this a strange love which will cling to its object though wife and children leave him, and though freedom is offered? This poor woman will doubtless strive to reach Washington, which is now over-crowded with runaway slaves who can find no employment, even if they wished. And in the meantime the poor creatures must suffer and perhaps starve; all owing to exaggerated ideas about the state of society North.

We met a number of Union men driven from Spotsylvania co. One old gray-headed man told us that his crime consisted in having two sons who refused to enter the Confed, (and cornfed) army. But I have not the space to make you full details.

We left Falmouth towards noon, and took a shorter road to this place than the one we went. A few miles out we passed Meads & Reynolds' Brigades of the Penn. Reserve. Doubtless the whole Division will soon center there.

Our horses were nearly fagged out when we reached camp, having travelled upwards of 100 miles in 20 hours, over awful roads. Quite a crowd gathered around us on our return. The expectation was general that we had been captured, and some were discussing how to send my effects home.

The "Iron Guards" are still in the vicinity, doing Provost duty at Cattletts. I believe they are all well.

Yours truly,
ARTILLERIST.

Uniformity of Prices!—A New Feature in Business. Every one his own Salesman! JONES & CO. of the Crescent One Price Clothing Store, No. 2-4 Market square above Sixth, Philadelphia.

In addition to having the largest, most varied and fashionable stock of Clothing in Philadelphia, made expressly for retail sales, have constituted every one his own salesman, by having marked in figures, on each article at the lowest price it can be sold for so they cannot possibly vary—all must buy alike.

The goods are well sponged and prepared, and great pains taken with the making so that all can buy with the full assurance of getting a good article at the very lowest price. Also, a large stock of piece goods on hand of the latest style and best qualities, which will be made to order, in the most fashionable and best manner, 25 per cent. below credit prices.

MILITARY UNIFORMS.—There is, perhaps, no department of military business in which there has been a more marked improvement than in the clothing of soldiers. Not many years since officers and privates were clad in garments which were almost skin-tight. They wore leather stocks, which were worthy of the name, for they kept the wearer in trim attitude; while their padded breasts and tight sleeves made volition a matter of great difficulty. During the present war, such of our volunteers as procure their uniforms at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall of Rockhill & Wilson, Nos. 603 and 605 Chestnut street, above Sixth, Philadelphia, obtain clothing that is perfectly easy, substantial and genteel. The firm named have gone largely into the business of making Military Clothing, and their facilities enable them to fill the largest order in the shortest possible time.

MARRIAGE.—ITS LOVES AND HATE. Sorrows and cares, hopes and fears, regret and joys; MANHOOD, how lost, how restored the nature, treatment and radical cure of spermatorhœa or seminal weakness; involuntary emissions, sexual debility and impediments to marriage generally; nervousness, consumption, fits, mental and physical incapacity, resulting from SELF-ABUSE—are fully explained in the MARRIAGE GUIDE, by WM. YOUNG, M. D. This most extraordinary book should be in the hands of every young person contemplating marriage, and every man or woman who desires to limit the number of their offspring to their circumstances. Every pain, disease and ache incidental to youth, maturity and old age, is fully explained; every particular knowledge that should be known is here given. It is full of engravings. In fact, it discloses secrets that every one should know; still it is a book that must be locked up, and not be about the house. It will be sent to any one on the receipt of twenty five cents in specie or postage stamps. Address DR. WM. YOUNG, No. 416 SPRUCE Street, above Fourth, Philadelphia.

☞ AFFLICTED AND UNFORTUNATE, no matter what may be your disease, before you place yourself under the care of any of the notorious quacks—native or foreign—who advertize in this or any other paper, get a copy of Dr. Young's book, and read it carefully. It will be the means of saving you many a dollar, your health, and possibly your life.

☞ YOUNG can be consulted on any of the diseases described in his publication, at his office, No. 416 SPRUCE Street, above Fourth, Philadelphia.

JAMES S. McNINCH, treasurer.
Treasurer's Office,
Bloomsburg, April 5, 1862.

TREASURER'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE —SEATED LAND

AGREEABLY to the provisions of the act of Assembly, entitled an Act to reduce the State debt, &c., passed the 20th day of April, 1841, the Treasurer of the County of Columbia hereby gives notice to all persons concerned therein, that unless the County road, school, poor and State Tax, &c. due on the following real estate situate in the county of Columbia, are paid before the day of sale, the whole or such parts of each as will pay the charges and costs chargeable thereon, will be sold at the Court House in Bloomsburg, co. of Columbia, on the 9th day of June 1862, being the second Monday, and to be continued by adjournment from day to day for arrearages of taxes due said county and the costs accrued on each respectively.
