TOPPING CORN-SAVING FODDER.

perform this part of the labor of raising Cassimers, and securing a crop of corn, yet it will do no harm to think about and compare our former practice with the result of the carefully and fairly tried experiment here introduced.

I find in Evans' Rural Economist the following extracts, said to be taken from a report to the Kent County, Delware, Agricultural Society, by S. B. C., upon the effect of "topping" corn, &c., and as quite a proportion of our old raisers are still in the habit of following this old custom, and some, though few, of the youngest ones, try the same, they seem appropriate.

"When I reported the last experiment on this subject, I thought I would not er experiment of the kind ; but having a piece of very even corn, and favorably situated for a full demonstration of mind, has established the facts that no portion of the todder can be taken while green, without material injury to the corn ; and that when the fodder is fully matured, the tops may be taken with very little loss of grain-less than two per cent. "The order of this experiment was the ALL KINDS OF GOODS same as last year, alternate sections of two rows each, repeated several times to the amount of an acre, as follows :

"No. 1. Left standing, made one hundred baskets per acre, which when shelled, weighed thirty-three pounds each, equal to fifty-nine bushels and forty-six pounds.

"No. 2. Topped without bladidg, made one hundred baskets, which weighed thirty-three pounds, equal to fifty-eight bushels fifty two pounds.

"No. 3. Cut by the ground, made ninety-six baskets, which weighed thirtythree pounds each, equal to fifty-six bushels thirty-two pounds.

"No. 4. Topped and stripped, made ninety baskets which weighed thirty-three and one-half pounds each, equal to fiftytwo bushels thirteen pounds.

"No. 5. Topped without stripping, Sept. 15th, made eighty-nine baskets, which weighed thrity-two and one-half pounds each, equal to fifty-one bushels "No. 5. Topped without stripping,
