

OBJECTS OF FOOD FOR CATTLE.

Why do animals require more foon in MERCHANDIZE, cold than in warm weather, and why suffet more if deprived of it ?

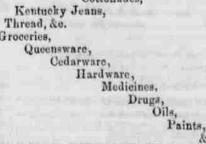

The objects of food are three : 1st, and latest fashions Calices, to supply material for growth to growing animals, and to compensates for wastes, both in the growing and in those already grown; 2d, to afford warmth, by a proceas similar to combustion, which certain ingredients of the food undergo in the animals body ; 3d, to afford pleasures. The Creator his provided for the happiness, as well as the mere existance, of all his creatures.

Practically the objects of food for domestic animals are two; to supply mat- Groceries, ter for the body, and to sustain its warmth. The portions of food containing nitrogen, as the glutten in the cercals and the lean of the meats go to form muscle, tendons, skin, and all other tissues of the body. Those not containing nitrogen, as the starch in the cereals, and the fat of meat, serve as fuel to keep up the temperaturs of the body. As God has done all things well, we may conclude that, in the natural food of animals, grass in summer, and hay, grain and roots in winter, there are about the right proportions of heat-producing and flesh-producing matter. It is so beyond question ; and if no unreasonable demaud is made upon eiteer, the two, as is vulgarty said of the bread and cheese, will come out even. If an animel is kept in a warm stall by night, and in a sunny yard by day, with sheds to detend from cold ALL KINDS OF winds, his bread and cheese will come out above even. In that part of his food which produces wrowth there will be mixed just about enough of the fuel portion to keep him warm. With a fair allowance he will be about as contented and happy as an oyster in deep water; his food will be well digested, and there will be no loss. But if you send him adrift to find the best shelter he can, behind a tree or a rail-fence, then, for the sake of the heat-producing parts of his food, he will devour more than would otherwise be required ; and a large proportion of the extra food will be lost .--What becomes of it, need not now be explained; for every one knows that cattle shivering with the cold, never grow, however much they eat, unless it be to grow smaller; and although some believe, or pretend to, that animals shockingly abused through the winter, will grow all the better in spring and summer, their belief will hardly obtain currency among the experienced farmers. They know the direct contrary-that when the growth is checked by severe when the growth is checked by severe suffering, it is slow to recommence, and that all the extra food cousumed for the want of shelter is worse than a dead loss. Man's obligations of kindness to the animals that surveyes his interest, should the solution for the solution of the solution of the shelter. But aside impel him to furnish shelter. But aside from this, there is a question of economy. The Esquimaux drinks a quart of train oil and eats plenty of fat seal, and contrives to keep himself from freezing in a very rigorous climate. In this latituds, cattle without a shelter might escape intolerable suffering if you would give PRINT FROM 7 TO 121 ets A YARD. them plenty of corn meal and oil cake Cassimers, and other fattening and heat-producing foods. But would this be economical? Without shelter cattle must either be fed very expensively, or suffer very cruelly; and in either case will they pay for their Groceries, food. With a warm sheltes, they will make a fair growth, on modeate keeping. It is a great deal provide shelter, than to get along without.
