And if no honest voice has yet reached the care of our government, I reached the care of our government, I were litterally fulfilled."

The President's Message.

Mr. Richardson, of Illinois, proceeded to review the message, observing that it was remarkable for what it says, and still more remarkable for what it omits. The one half of the twenty-one pages is devoted to the negro. There was no page, no sentence, no line as to the bravery and good conduct of those in the field fighting to maintain the flag and the Constitution of the Union. No sorrow was expressed for the lamented dead-no mention made of the maimed and wounded-no sympathy was expressed for the widows and the suffering orphans made in the progress of this war, which could have been avoided by honorable compromise if the President and his friends had desired to avoid civil war.

The sum and substances of this message was to tax the white man mortgage him and his posterity forever, to free feed, clothe, and colonize the negro. When our people, anxious for the restoration of the Union and the return of peace, look to the message to see what information they could get on that subject, they could draw only by inference that the war would end in thirty seven years, provided all the President's were adopted by Congress and the people. But, then, the President gave the consolation that most of us would be dead by that time. Every proposed change of the Constitution was for the negro. No proposition was made to change the Constitution for the benefit of the white or to perpetuate the Union of these States by preserving the Constitution of the country. The people will, in due time, compromise for the benefit of white men, and not for the negroes. He had hoped that the President would so conduct himself that he might accord to him his support but he had hoped against hope. The President had violated the pledges he made in his inaugural address, by his proclamae tion of the 22d of September.
