CONCLUSION. At such a time as this, and in such strugle, political partisanship should be merged in a true and brave patriotism, which thinks only of the good of the whole country. It was in this cause and with these motives that so many of ou comrades have given their lives, and to this we are all personally pledged in all honor and fidelity. Shall such devotion as that of our dead comrades be of no avail ? Shall it be said in after ages that we lacked the vigor to complete the work thus begun? That after all these noble lives freely given, we hesitated and failed to keep straight on until our land was saved ? Forbid it Heaven,

Oh spirits of the valiant dead, souls of our slain heroes, lend us your own indomitable will, and if it be permited you to commune with those still chained by the trammels of mortality, hover around us in to say that they were promptly snubbed, care of Lincoln, Stanton & Co , had been the midst of danger and tribulation-cheer and the result was that the entire recep- rapidly growing small by degrees, and the firm, strengthen the weak, that none tion was a failure, and disgusted a majori beautifully less. may doubt the salvation of the Republic and the triumph of our grand old flag. In the midst of the storms which toss our ship of state, there is one great beacon light to which we can ever turn with confidence and hope. It cannot be that this great nation has played its part in history; it cannot be that our sun, which arose with such bright promise for the future has already set forever. It must be the intention of the overruling Deity that this land, so long the asylum of the oppressed, the refuge of civil and religious liberty shall again stand forth in bright relief, united, purifidesire the progress of the human race. It is not given to our weak intellects to understand the steps of Providence as they occur; we comprehend them only as we look back upon them in the far distant past; so it is now. We cannot unravel the seemingly tangled skein of the purposes of the Creator-they are too high and farreaching for our limite' minds. But all history and His own revealed word teach us that His ways, although inscrutable, are manfully play our parts, seek to understand and perform our whole duty, and trust unwaveringly in the beneficient God who led our ancestors across the sea, and appalling even than those encountered by His own chosen people in their great ex-He did not bring us here in vain, nor HARRISBURG, July 5, 1864. On the breath of sulphurous vapors and "villanous saltpetre" were borne to us rumors of invasion, and "war's alarums" filled the city with a thousand rumors yesterday, adding a zest to the excitement But Harrisburg, and no doubt all the the towns in Cumberland valley, have got used to these atarms, which are becoming quite familiar to our eave ; so that perves are by no means "unstrung" now that new alarms greet us from the border, and we are told the Rebels are again advancing northward.

At one time the Rebels were represented as having crossed the Potomoc and on their way to Hagerstown and Greencastle full tilt. The next hour brought an official despatch from Maj. General Couch denying there were any Rebels this side of the Potomac. One despatch from the border would exaggerate the forces of the enemy to ten or fifteen thousand, which subsequent official despatches would re duce to three or four thousand guerrillas

The facts seem to be as telegraphed you last night, that at six o'clock on Sunday morning Siegel was driven from Leetown and Dartville, by a superior force of the enemy, whose cavalry numbered some twenty-six hundred all told, but whose in fantry seem to be involved in such oqseurity, so far as ascertained their number is concerned. Falling back on Martinsburg Sigel, was again obliged to retreat this time to the fortifications at Harper's Ferry. Our losses in men cannot be great. because of the insignificance of the force under Siegel at the time of the attack.

That the forces of the enemy cannot be very great is pretty well indicted in the fact that, with all the forces of cavalry they are represented as having, Siegel escaped with very few captures. It is hardly probable that more than one-third or one half of the forces sent against Hunter, at Staunton and Lynchburg, have advanced porthward with this mythical
