Management of Orchards. BY JUDE FRENCH.

No man living, I think, can show a good orchard of grafted fruit which was kept in grass the first ten years of its life.

The theory is, that when date nature, along in summer and early autumn, is lying her plan for next year's operation, she forms buds without at first deciding whether they shall be for leaves or fruit.

I know of no substitute for plowing orchards, unless it be mulching. There is a practical difficulty however, that all experience in raising apple orchards has not observed; undoubtedly, low branching trees are most healthy, most productive, most convenient in all respects, except in cultivation.

They were near the sea, and the mulch was the coarse grass of the dunes. Where any mulch can be cheaply obtained, I think trees may be planted about twenty-two feet apart, allowed to form low heads, and so cover the ground, and the orchard kept free from grass and weeds by this covering the surface.

How to GROW PEACH TREES.—Mr. H. Payne, of Lockport, N. Y. says, "Plant the pits where you intend the trees to grow, and bud them there. I can get a longer, better and more productive tree at four years old, and one that will last as long again, as I can from a budded tree transplanted.

Platoes.—Be sure that potatoes in pits in the open ground have good ventilation and drainage, but are well covered. Those in cellars should be dry and cool, but not so cold as apples.

Poultry in warm, light, clean quarters will if the hens be well fed, secure plenty of eggs all winter. Feed freely those destined for market. Prices are usually best just before or after the holidays. Sorap, from beef and pork fatting, are much related, and induce laying.
