DEMOCRACY, a sentiment not to be appealled, correct. ed or compromised. It knows no baseness, it cowers to no danger, it oppresses no weakness. Destructive only of despotism it is the sole conservator of liberty, labor and property. It is the sentiment of freedom, of equal rights, of equal obligations—the law of nature pervading the law of the land-Alles.

The other day President Johnson gave a bit of advice to a regiment of negroes which was far less applicable to them than to the radicals. He said : "It should be the duty of every patriot, and every one who calls himself a Christian, to remember that with the termination of the wor his resentments should cease, that every man should become calm and tranquil, and be prepared for what is before him. Under the above caption, we copy an Editorial article from the columns of the Christian Advocate and Journal, of Oct. 12th. It is a remarkable production, considering the source from which it springs. We were not prepared, however, to find this journal at so early a stage in the contest advocating the amalgamation theory, along with its other budget of political dogmas, and calling upon the church of its adoption to unite with the radical republicans in a crusade against Constitutional law, for the sake of engrafting new fangled isms upon our statute books. The whole tenor of the article is as unchristian in its tone as it is false in its assumption.

The Episcopal Convention was thrown into enother stew over a series of resolutions, introduced by Horace Binney, Jr., setting forth the great joy felt by himself and clique over the decease of the nigger. This question had been very summarily disposed of at another session, and it was hoped never again to be resurrected. But the true and sincere friends of the Church were mistaken in their men. They had hoped, nay thought, that Binney & Co., being churchmen of the straight-laced school, had the interest of that great organization too much at heart to hezard its again being disturbed by their ill-timed resolutions. But their hopes were dissipated on Tuesday last-the day by the way had been set aside by the Convention as one of the thanksgiving to God over the
