is generally fordable for troops, but its banks are extremely rugged, and in most patts steep; the willows along it had been out down, in order to prevent them from affording cover to the attacking party, and in fact everything had been done to deprive an assailant of any species of shelter. In front of the position on the right bank, at about 200 yards from the Alma, is the village of Bentliock, and near it a timber bridge, which had been partly destroyed by the enemy.—

CCRES AFTER THE BATTLE.

It was a terrible and sickening sight to go over the battle field. Till deprived of my horis by a chance shot frode about to ascertain, as far as possible, the loss of our friends, and in doing so, I was often brought to a standstill by the difficulty of getting through the piles of wounded Russians, mingled too often with bour own poor soldiers. The hills of Genwich Park in fair time are not more densely covered with human beings thun were the heights of the form of taking aim, the brow compressed, the lips clenched—the very expression of firing at an enemy stamped on his face and fixed there by death, a ball had struck this man in the neck. Physiologists anatomists must seule the rest. Autother was lying on his back with the same expression, and his arms raised in a similar attitude, the Minie musket still grasped in his hands undischarged. Another tay is a perfect arch, his head resting on one part of the ground and his fest on another, but the back raised high above it: Many men without legs or arms but all whom she selected were unwilling to leave town. The domestic above refered to, however, expressed a willingness to engage, but the lady did not like her appearance. But fidally she was reluctantly completed to access of her services. She accordingly ordered her to appear with her trunk at the Mansion House, at 8 o'clock, the following morning, where she found her in time quarrelling with the carman, whom she officed a sixpence—all the money she said she had—for conveying her box to the place of rendszous. The lady settled the difficulty, placed her protege in the stage, and proceeded with her to her pleasant mansion in old Schoharie.

Nothing transpired for several days to disturb either mistress or servant. The latter took hold with most wounderful industry, rising at 4 o'clock every morning, and working so long as there was any work to be done. Indeed, so assidious was she that the lady of the house reproved her for working harder and later this was accessary. Her only reply was that the could not bear to be idle, and would rather, work than play. The first remark on eccentricities was made by a little girl, who one morning extend the parter with open mouth and eyes exclaiming "Oh! grandma, what do you think, that new girl cose down the cellar stairs at a single jump!" But this was but deemed sufficiently strange to excite any oiter remark than that she was "a stiar, girl!" New developement, however, were in reserve, A few evenings after, when all
