Series for 1855. THE HOME JOURNAL.

The first number of the new series will be issued on the first of January next. New subscribers can be supplied from that date; but immediate application will be necessary for such as desire to begin with the beginning. A home is hardly complete; we think we may safely centure to say, without the Home Journal, which, besides being a chronicle of the times, abounds in intelligence designed to enliver an American Home. Its editors (Co. P. Morris and N. P. Willis) devote their entire time, skill and experience, to the task of giving, each week, everything worth knowing. They particularly keep an eye on all the whims and novelties of the day. The utmost pains are taken to present the facts and outlines of all news. In the literary department, we aim at exercises and readable criticism, and in our condensations of the productions of the vast new-papet world of Europe, we enceavour to avoid the tiresome and the local, and transfer to our columns the piex of English information and brilliancy, while we endeavour to select with a true sense of pure morals, true wit, and geunine humour. In addition to the above, we have made new new air ingements for a feature that is always attactive in the family journal. From several different sources we are to be supplied with the news and gossip of New-York Society. In a metropolis like ours, centre the more sparking elements of the life of our country at large, and collision and attition bring out much which would else be dormant, Afleat, in society gossip, is a small world, of which the ordinary newspapers make no report, and of this we think we can promise amount photographaps.
