I am free from symptoms of the aniversal peat, I am conscious of a stiffness in the tendons, and a shortness of breath, and a weariness of the bones, that should naturally attend the eroption which devers any body. But I have none of the more fearful signs. I can welk with energy after I get starmed tip. I have no bleeding of the grant, and, better than all, thank God, I am without that horribts dispendency which the disease nourishes and facile on. In the different explorations by members of the party, the nonbers coast of Greenland was surveyed to its termination in the great Humbolds Glacies—this glacial mass was examined and described as far as its nonthward detention into the new lend named Wastington—a large tract of land forming the extension nonthward of the American continent was discovered—and the existence ascertained of air open and iceless sea towards the Pole, making an area, with the channel, of over four thousand miles. The discovery of this Point Sea is one of the most interesting results of Arctic exploration. It had long been suspected that such a tract of water was to be found in the vicinity of the Pole, and the suspicion was confirmed to some extent by actual or, supposed discoveries. But titherto no entiractory proof of the fact had been obtained. The evidence which Dr. Kune has had the true good fortune to collect is founded on facts of immediate observation. The coast of this mysterious sea was viewed from an elevation of five hundred and eighty feet; presenting the same limities apsettele, moved by a heavy swell, free from ice, and dashing in earf against a rock-bound abote. In connection with this discovery, exercil facts were broggeth to light indicating a milder-climate near the Pole.—Crowds of marine blinks, the advance of vegetable life, the melted snow upon the necks, and the rise of the thermometer in the water, suggested the supposition of a climate meliorallop towards the Pole, although Dr. Rane decions engaging in the discoveries of this Poles.—In goneladding our extended notice of this

A vein of beautranity pervades its composition, and the describing of the most describing of the most described. oven in the describing of the most desperate costs, a latking busser often peops forth, flowing the importance of uncongenial circumstances to depress an elastic and generate nature. The ethical lesson of the volumes is a no less precious gift to the reader has its colentific instruction and picturesque dementions.

Affairs in Europe appear to be rather comlicated. The English and Fennch alliance a every day growing weaker. By the arriul of the Seamer City of Washington we earn that "the Bridsh ficet is formally anlounced to remain in the Black Sea, until Rassia folialis her obligations; that Great Brilain, Austria and Turkey claim to be firmly united in this policy; that these three powers are making stremous efforts to withdraw Louis Napoleous from coquettion efforts to secure his alliance."

The difficulty with Naples remains unchanged. The recalled English and French ambaseadors had atrived at Marseilles.

The strangest feature of the course is a confirmation of the alliance between England and Austria.

It is to be hoped that the New England Republicans have learned wisdom from the failure of their Emigrant Aid Speculation, and that the child of the early November blast has cooled their fury into a little sober reason. The Kansas speculation has neither paid in a political nor pecuniary point; and the action of the Vermont legislature indicates that the burnt children of fanateians know the fire that seconded them withm. It is a gratification to see how the frest of November nipped in the bud the plot of mischief and hypoerisy.
