FARM BOOK.

"For the be-t plan of a book in which the farmer can record his practice and ex-perience in the plainest, most simple and concise manner. The value of a well kept farm record can scarcely be over estimated. It should be clear, explicit, and comprehensive-should contain the daily operation of the farm, notes of the weather and its vicissitudes ; all interesting items about the animals of the farm, dairy, orchard ;- in short everything worth remembering about the operations of the farm, which must neces sarily be bringing mary things together not properly connected but only to be re-membered; the other the book for future ed regularly from the beginning, with the date prefixed to each day's record, so that it would be a continuous record from one day to another through the year. The ledger should be large enough for the purposes of one year, of may be sufficiently large for several years It should contain, under seperate heads, so as to be easy of access, all the substance if the journal, with some important additions. This Sde is now in Evans & Wat SDUW OPEN WITH POWDER, and one of Farrel, Herring, & Co's best pa-tern Powder prior Lock and Sate was BLOWN OPEN WITH POWDER, and stigged on cash taken out and carried uway. This Sde is now in Evans & Wat subjects treated of in the book, with the subjects treated of in the book, with the subjects treated of in the lodger is to be treated seperately, on a seperate page, and to contain only what the farmer will need for future reference, Much of this matter is to be drawn from the journal, and may be transferred at regular intervals-each week, or month—or at the most con-venient times. If Apples be the subject of the first entry, it will be put on the "Ar" leaf in the index and given the first page in the book. name is to be put on the "W" leaf m the index, and to occurp? the second page; and so of each subject to be treated.

The ledger will contain much that need not be recorded in the journal-as the kind of crop, when put in, when harve-ted, with the yield, would be very useful for future reference, and compare one year with an other. In this way, the yield of the farm, or any part of it, is easily made out.
In this appropriate place, at the end of the year, will be made the balance sheet, containing the expenses, the losses, and the yrot. This could be made very readily from a well arranged book.
In this way, a farmer will in a few years, have laid up a store of experience that will be always valuable, and especially if he is a man of progress; for if his cultivation at one time is faulty, the record of it is continually before him, and the admonition will not be lost.—Cor. of Genese Farmer.
