BLOOMSBURG, WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1859. Democratic Nominations.

> FOR AUDITOR GENERAL. RICHARDSON L. WRIGHT, FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL JOHN ROWE.

County Offices.

The county offices to be filled this fall are of considerable importance, and should be supplied with men of the purest integrity and possessing the highest business capacities which the county affords. A District Attorney, Treasurer, Commissioner and ar Auditor will be elected this fall; and as yet we have not seen a single name announced for any of these offices. The present Dis-trict Attorney, it is probable, will be a candidate for re-election to that office. We can think of no man at this moment more suitable for the office than the present incumbent. The Treasurer's office is one of dieavy responsibilities, and in the selection nan to fill this office, great care should be exercised, that a man may be chosen who is worthy, capable and honest. The Commissioner's office seems to us one of much importance; and it requires a man of good duties pertaining to the office of Commis-The nomination this fall belongs geographically to one of the upper townships. Step forward, gentlemen, and have your names announced, that the public know who are candidates.

Politics in Our County.

This is a season of the year in which political matters are, pretty generally, at a stand-still in our county You accost a ture and he has no desire to engage in a conversation of this character, s the reason, that it is not seasonable. (We have refference to the people throughout the county, in particular.) But engage upon most any other subject, the Fly in the Wheat for instance, and you will find that you have met a very well informed man upon that issue. This may be as it is, the time is not far distant, when politics will be the general gossip, and be discussed on every street corner, and in every field of labor.— Politics in our county, as far as we can learn, are assuming a fair aspect for a tre-mendous defeat to the Republican party in 1860, say nothing about the majority in our favor this fall. The democracy are becoming more firm every day upon the grand prin ciples of the party. They are harmoniously working in one channel, shoulder to should er, furthering on the good cause in which they have enlisted.

The State nominees are men of undoubted ability and character, worthy of the en-tire Democra ic support, which they should by all means receive. WRIGHT and ROWE abundantly capable, in every particular, for the respective offices for which they have been nominated. Our District and county nominations will not be made until er part of August next. As for legislative members the people in this county are pretty unanimous in returning Messrs OAKES and JACKSON, who so ably and honestly represented us at Harrisburg last winter This will be right; just what should be done. Let this suffice for the present. We will speak at further length upon this sub-

Hundreds of young men are yearly graduating in these Colleges and taking responsible and lucrative positions for which they were thus qualified.

THE LADIES' HOME MAGAZINE, published by T. S. Arthur & Co., in Philadelphia, has made its appearance, in good season, for the month of August. It looks exceedingly well, and cannot fail being perused with interest by all who are blessed with its visits. It is calculated to be highly esteemed in whatever section of country it may circulate. There are few publications of like character in this country which will favorably compare with this one in question. It is remarkably cheap, two dollars

The War's New Aspect.

The intelligence from Europe is most im portant. Napoleon has followed up the Battle of Solferino, and the other victories in Italy, in a manner wholly unexpected. Yet cy might almost have anticipated what has appened. The policy, which spared Austria repeatedly, was to endeavor to make peace immediately after he had achieved ome considerable victory.

On July 7th, a fortnight after the victory

Solferino, the Emperor Napoleon offered an armistice to the Emperor of Austria -The offer has been accepted, the terms had not been arranged, but there will be gust, which happens to be what the Romans call "a white day" in French history, as the nunctieth anniversary of the great Napoleon's birth. During this temporary peace, both armies will be strengthened, no loubt, to prepare for the chances of renew ed hostilities. Perhaps the imperial leaders themselves may meet and endeavor to adjus the differences between them. The Mon teur, authoritatively expressing the Imperial will, gravely cautions France against thinking the armistice must necessarily mean peace. It leaves the field open for negotiation. When Napoleon quitted Paris, he ex pressed the intention of making Italy free from the Appenines to the Adriatic. Is the likely to be content with less than this?

Napoleon, as the conquering power, could gracefully suggest the armisti Emperor of Austria, baffled, beaten, and humbled, as he is, could not ask for. Aus tria entered upon the War at a time choser by herself, invaded Piedmont suddenly nd, with a great superiority in numbers has been beaten in every encounter-beat en at Montebello, at Palestro, at Magenta at Marignana, and at Solferino. His forces however numer cally superior, have failed in the face of Europe. The armistice occurs, it has been said, on the expected news in an other battle: " The celebrated fortified quadrangle had been reached, Peschiera had been invested. Mantua had been masked, Verona was upon the point of being sum moued. Venice was threatened and Garibaldi was manœuvring upon the rear of the great fortresses." At this cricis, whe some 500,000 human beings were about this cricis, when destroying each other, by fire and sword, Napoleon, actuated by humanity or policy, or by both, intervenes with a proposal which suspends the warfare and gives a breathing space for negotiation. The leading English journals look upon peace as almost certain.

ITALY, AND THE WAR OF 1859 .- Giving history of the causes of the War, with Bio-graphical sketches and finely engraved Por-traits of its Heroes, together with the offi-cial accounts of the Battles of Montebello, Palestro, Magenta: etc. etc. and Maps of by Madame Julie De Margueritles, With an introduction by Dr. R. "ITALY AND THE WAR OF 1859."-Thi handsome volume, written by Madame Julie de Marguerittes, and suitably illustra ted with Maps and Portraits has just been published by G. G. Evans, (the original Gift Book Publisher) of Philadelphia, at the low price $1.25 and is well timed as it is well executed. The design is to show Italy in her Past and Present, so that the reader may understand on what grounds she base her expectancy of a glorious Future, with this view the author, who has travelled largely through Europe, and has resided for a considerable period in Milan, with visits to the other great cities of Itlay, describes places with which she is acquainted, and personages whom she intimately knew.— The statistics of the various States now engaged in hostilities, are given, with biogra phical sketches of the Sovereigns generally, and Statesmen, whom the war has throw into prominency. A great deal of persons anecdote is introduced, which very much authentic account of the war itself up to the present time, including the official of the various battles, and the chivalrous

Our favorite agricultural journal—The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST—has come to hand for August. It is the most useful publication of the kind for the farmer now published. We can not describe near all its good qualities if we were to attempt it. It treats upon every thing that is calculated to interest and benefit the tiller of the soil -We see an article in the present number devoted to wheat Insects, which no doubt at this moment occupies much of the farmers' attention, as their wheat was more or less injured by this destroyer. THE CHARLESTON CONVENTION.

last hope of the many-hued Oppos ion is that the Charleston Convention will dissolve the Democratic party! When the ionest, intelligent, and thoroughly-informed people of the United States reflect upon this fact, they will see how forlorn are the rospects of our political antagonists. Because ambitious, aspiring, and hot eaded politicians here and there, who have een honored by the Democratic party and elevated to offices of distinction and trust. hoose to take grounds on important nation questions antagonistic to each other, or not only to each other, but to the well the prophets of Black Republicanism and the other sections of the Opposition delude themselves into the idle dream that the National Democracy will be broken up at

They are joined, if not instigated, in these ridiculous predictions by certain "sensa-tion" journals that care not what absurd fictions or improbabilities they utter, provided they can succeed in fabricating matter of talk to serve the purposes or the day.

For the special information of those who irculate, and those who pretend to believe heselstories of the approaching dissolution of the great Democratic party, the Constituional Democracy will show at Charleston casions-that they have a very short and ummary method of dealing with disorganizers. If any man from any section of the Jnion ventures to go thither haughtily to offer to that congress of equals-of men of individual character, personal honor and absolute independence-his ultimatum, or a platform constructed to suit his own cro ets-if any man goes there determined to should fall upon me. I am prepared to de produce disaffection, or to exasperate it, fend what I have done before the only tri we make bold to say, from our knowledge of the course of fo rmer Conventions, and from the resolute and independent spirit of own conscience and the bar of Heaven. Democrats, that such a person will very speedily find out neither the likings or dislikings of himself or any other man are ma-terial to the harmony of the Convention, or the triumph of the Convention's nominee.

Will the forlorn Opposition, with its differing and antagonistic factions, never awaken to the fact that the cause of the National Democracy does not depend on the adhesion of this or that man, however really or fictitiously eminent, to their organiza tion? Who are they upon whose disaffection to the general cause of our time-honor-ed party the Opposition rely to break up the Charleston Convention in confusion, disaster, and disgrace? What are they beyond many other enlightened and distin-guished Democrats, except so far as the Naonal Democracy has made them eminent, and avished honors upon them ?

"Sparta has many a worthier son than he ay well be applied to the best of them. Let the "sensation" journals (the chief of which in New-York has been busiest in this silly twaddle? continue then to prate about the coming "break-up" at Charles ton-let the unfortunate Opposition, split up, as it is, into fragments, echo these epemeral prophecies-let the disaffected aspirants indulge the flattering fancy that they will have their own way or defeat the eneral will-we tell the latter that they will be able neither to rule or rum at Charleston and that the only discomfiture exhibited there will be the discomfiture of those who may be predicting and striving for the destruction of the National Democracy.

Preamble and Resolutions

Of the Berwick Lodge, No. 246, of I. O. of O F., in memory of Isaac N. Nichols, deceased WHEREAS, an unforseen and painful accident has suddenly cut down in our midst, one of the most active and honored of our members. Therefore—

LETTER FROM HON. D. E. SICKLES. New York, 19, 1859.

Through the course of sad events, which during the last few months have brought so much affliction upon my family, I have been silent. No amount of misrepresentation al-fecting myself only could induce me now to open my lips; nor could I deem it worth while under my croumstances to notice what has been of can be said in journals never regarded as the sources or the expoents of public opinion, for in these it is too often obvious that only unworthy motives prompt the most vindictive assaults upon the private life of citizens holding public tations. But the editorial comments in the Herald of vesterday, although censorious (of which I do not complain, whilst I read them with regret), differ so widely in tone and temper from the mass of nonsense and calumny which has lately been written concerning a recent event in my domestic relations, that I cannot allow a mistake, in: which you have been led by inaccurate in formation, to pass without such a correction as will relieve others from any share of the reproaches which it is the pleasure of the multitude at this moment to heap upon me

Referring to the forgiveness which my sense of duty and my feelings impelled me to extend to an erring and repentant wife, you observe, in the course of your temperate and dignified article, that, "It is said however, that the last phase of the affair was brought about through the advice of I did not exchange a word with one of my counsel upon the subject, nor with any one else. If I ever failed to comprehend the utterly desolate position of an offending though penitent woman—the hopeless future, with all its dark possibilities of danger, to which she is doomed when proscribed as an outcast-I can now see plainly enough, in the almost universal howl of denunciation with which she is followed to my threshold, the misery and perils from which I have rescued the mother of my child. And although it is very sad for me to incur the blame of all obstacles in my path the good results of this example shall entitle it to the imitation of the generous and the commendation of he admired.

There are many who think that an act of duty proceeding solely from affections which can only be comprehended in the heart of a husband and a father, is to be fatal to my professional, political and social standing. If this be so, then so be it. Political stations professional success, social recognition, are not the only prizes of ambition; and I have seen enough of the world in which I have moved, and read enough of the lives of others, to teach me that, if one be patient and resolute, it is the man himself who indicates the place he will occupy; and so long as I do nothing worse than to re-unite my family most the roof where they may find shelter from contumely and persecution, I do not fear the noisy but fleeting voice of popular clamor. The multitude accept their first impressions from a few; but in the end men think for themselves, and if I Resolved. Ep. STAR: - On glancing over the colur naturally fond of reading, I concluded to ex and I must confess that I was still greate wish to state that there never was a celebra I can get from him when he says, 'Thoughts suggested by a Celebration.' Now, if such tirring sound of the fife and drum.

There was a Celebration at Still Water of the second day of July, some four miles from Benton, which was composed of the Still Water, Benton and Cambra Sunday Schools. by many who were present to be the very best one of the kind they ever attended thing of the kind, it must have been pretty on the ground selected for the Celebration, and I believe if Philo had been where he friend's and the reproaches of many wise and good people, I shall strive to prove to all the world an erring wife and mother may be forgiven and redeemed, that in spite of but does not tell us what it was, showing at once that he paid more attention to such things as he deprecated, than those which > He further says, "many may well doubt the propriety of having a military company with the pomp and show of war, marching at the head of a procession of Sabbath School children even to celebrate the Fourth of July." Were there not many at the time o our struggle for independence opposed to military show, and said an appeal to arms was unnecessary? I doubt if Philo had lived in those days, he would have been one of that number. He says, 'feeling some what patriotic' he attended a Celebration at Benton, Now, reader, what would you think of a soldier's patriotism if in time of a battle he would manage to be about as close to the enemy, as Philo was to the Celebra tion,—a little more than four miles off. (I mean if he had reference to the celebration at Still Water.) I most heartily concur with Philo where he says, "great care should b taken that the young and impetuous mind present, the duty they owed to their Creator, and also to give them at least a faint idea of the trials and struggles which our forefathers had to pass through, in the purchasing of the glorious Liberty which we now enjoy, and also to instil into their young and tender minds a desire to perpet uate that Liberty so dearly bought. conclude by saying, that if Philo will come out from behind the bushes, and let himself be known he will be entitled to a blue ticket, and perhaps at the close of our Sunday School this fall he will receive a red one.

Surely, thought I, there must be some mistake here, as I am a resi dent of the immediate vicinity of Benton, and had not heard of it before. But being amine it and see what a Celebration thought. surprised on reading it. In the first place tion at Benton, unless judging from Philo's communication, that he, himself, composed a Celebration. This Celebration was got up with great care and considerable expense, and reflects much credit on the inhabitants of the place, for the taste and convenience, displayed in all their arrangements, and was acknowledged notwithstanding the procession was headed by a small military company, of which I can see no impropriety, and as for reeling, tottering and blaspheming, if Philo saw any close about the lavern, (where no doubt Philo spent most of his time) as it was not have a course taste or prurient imagination.

LECTURES FOR THE PROPLE - By the Rev. Chapel, Liverpool. First Series. With a Biographical Introduction by Dr. R. Shelto Mackenzie. Published under a special arrangement with the Author. One volume, 12mo, cloth, with a Steel Portrait.—

Opinion of the English Press: "We have Opinion of the English Press: "We have read Mr. H. S. Brown's "Lettures" with much satisfaction. Mr. Brown knows how to speak to the people. He has almost every qualification for it, if we may judge from his printed addresses. There is no maudlin sentimentality about him; but all is healthful as the breeze on the hill. There is no clap-trup; he is both too honest and too earnest for that. There is no lap-trup; too earnest for that. There is neither a Pharisaic scorn of vice, nor any efferminate apologizing for it, but a wise Christian nan's righteous hatred for it, who know how to look on those who are sin degraded as his brethren. He speaks to the almost as one of themselves, only from a higher level; and, though he uses their daily phrases, yet he does not thereby pander to vulgarity. He has a happy acquai ance with our homely common sense proverbs, and employs them tellingly. There is no affectation of extraordinary concern for the poor' or their 'souls ;' but there is that real manly concern which can afford to dispense with profession, and to express itself chiefly in calm but brave and sensibly earnest endeavors. The proverb, 'much cry and little wool,' you may reverse in his case. His true desire to benefit the people is partly shown by the pains with which he collects and prepares the statistics of vice, poverty, disease, &c., in order that his well marshalled facts may preach to the under standing. The genuineness of his earnestness is evinced by the cheerfulness with which it toils along the highway of common sense. He has no recourse to reckless undiscriminating charges, and is too strong for exaggeration. Truth is enough for him; would that this were no distinction! While for exaggeration. Truth is enough for him; would that this were no distinction! While he faithfully touches the worst vices, yet you never feel that the censor himself must have a course taste or prurient imagination.

These Sunday atternoon lectures are not 'sermons,' nor intended to be. In them he grapples with acknowledged evils; but still, while opening the eyes of the people to the real nature of much of what their daily life too often is, and showing what it might be, he is never ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, nor chargeable with even seeming to let them go away with the impression that anything else, and not the kingdom of heaven, is the first thing to be sought.

In Mr. Brown we have a man who, we should judge, can afford to go where any should should should should should should should should should shoul
