These little pests are a great eye-sore to all farmers and grain dealers, and a little care and trouble will keep them away, and at the same time the remedy will be a benefit to most kinds of coarse grain. For the benefit of those who would like to keep grain all summer, or a year, I will, in a brief manner, give the course to pursue that the loss by these little thieves may be comparatively small.

After the grain is in the big and made level and smooth, put on the top about four quarts of fresh slacked lime; let this be spread evenly over the grain. This will keep ou rats and mice in the bin that contains one hundred bushels. This lime must be slacked so it looks like flour fresh from the miller's bolt. If the lime is left upon the surface of the grain, the rats and mice will not skip and play there a great deal before they will have to sneeze some; and, further not skip and play there a great deal before they will have to sneeze some; and, further than this, there is always enough grease or oily substance remaining upon the feet of rats and mice to make the lime adhere to them. After they have been once into it they will not return again the second time. You may likewise throw this lime about their haunts with much benefit; but if insects are to be kept out, you must mix the lime with the grain as you put it in the bin, and shovel it through and through until it is mixed thoroughly; then place on the top four quarts of slacked lime. Four quarts of unslacked lime is sufficient for one hundred bushels of grain; and it will do no hurt in a their old occupation. unslacked lime is sufficient for one hundred bushels of grain; and it will do no hurt in many kinds of grain if it is never taken out, for it is an alkali which is good for botts in horses. It will neutralize the acid in hog swil, and prevent their vomiting; and, in fact this small quantity of lime would be abenefit to most kinds of stock if it should be ground with the grain.

If you apply the lime to wheat, buckwheat, and corn, or the like, and do not want it in the grain, get out your fanning mill and run it through.

mill and run it through.

To slake lime perfectly, put into a tight, stout vessel and pour on boiling water, about half as much water as lime in bulk; cover up the lime as soon as the water is in and leave it until cool. Good unslaked lime will more than double its dimensions when well slaked .- A. L. SMTH, Genesee Farmer.

To PRESERVE GREEN GAGES .- The following receipt appears to be a good one : Pick and prick all the plums; put them into a pre-serving pan, with cold water enough to cover them; let them remain on the fire until the water simmers well; then take off and allow them to stand until half cold, putting the plums to drain. To every pound of plums allow one pound of sugar, must be boiled in the water from which the plums have been taken; let it boil very fast until the syrup drops short from the spoon, skimming carefully all the time. When the sugar is sufficiently boiled, put in the plums, and allow them to boil until the sugar covers the pan with large bubbles then pour the whole into a pan, and le them remain until the following day; drain the syrup from the plums as dry as possi-blle, boil it up quickly and pour it over the plums; then set them by; do this a third or fourth time. On the fifth day, when the syrup is boiled, put the plums into it, and t them boil for a few minutes; then put them into jars. Should the green gages be over-ripe, it will be better to make them, using three fourths of a pound of sugar to one pound of fruit. Warm the jars before putting the sweetmeats in, and be not to boil the sugar to a candy. Ger. Tel.

Scientific Facts.

A slight blow is sufficient to smash a whole pane of glass, while a bullet from a gun will only make a small round hole in it; because in the latter case, the particles of glass that receive the blow are torn away from the remaider with such rapidity that the motion imparted to them has no time to spread further. A door standing open which would readily yield on its hinges to a gentle push, is not moved by a cannon ball passing through it. The ball, in passing through overcomes the whole force of cohesion among the atoms of wood but its force act so short a time, owing to its rapid passage, that it is not sufficient to affect the in ertia of the door to an extent to produce -motion. The cohesion of the part of the wood cut out by the ball would have borne a very great weight laid quietly upon it; but suppose the ball to fly at the rate of twelve hundred feet in a second, and the door to be one inch thick, the cohesion being allowed to act for only the minute fracceived. It is an effect of this same principle that the iron head of a hammer may be driven down on its wooden handle, by striking the opposite end of the handle against any hard substance with force and speed.— In this very simple operation, the motion propagates so suddenly through the wood of the handle, that is over before it can reach the iron head, which, therefore, by its own weight, sinks lower on the handle at every blow, which drives the handle up

TRIALS OF A BLOOMER .- A Dress Refor Convention in session at Auburn last week was well attended. Mrs. Joy, of Syracuse made the speech on the occasion, Mrs Choate, of Syracuse, related, with evident embarrassment, the many trials and tribulations she passed through in adopting the dress of the reformers. Her friends, to the number of thirty or more, left her, and she felt alone in the world. When she passed through the streets of Syracuse, her native place, no gentleman would touch his hat to her, but on many occasions had actually avoided her by poping down an alley or running up a neighboring stairway: When she passed through the streets the sly ines, the winks and shrugs of the men on the sidewalk, went to her soul like steel but she had resolved on liberty or death, short skirts or nothing, and, regardless of the loss of friends, she clung to the Bloomers
