Agricultural Department. "Running in Debt."

A large majority, probably five-sixth, o the farmers of this country owe part of the purchase money for their farms, which are mortgaged as security for its payment. This is deplored by many as an almost unmitigated evil, and they are very fluent in expatiating upon the evils which they believe are inseperable from such a state of things They represent the debtor as under an op-pressive bondage that cripples his energies, deters him from making needed improve-ments, and compels him to toil year after year, perhaps for a lifetime, for the benefit of the creditor, who is unfrequently pictured as a grasping, unrelenting, soul-less being oubtedly many have unwisely encumbered themselves too heavily, and others, lacking energy, are bearing as a burden what they might make a stepping stone to competence. The complaints of such have led some to conclude that debt is an evil in which no farmer should become involved. But, although it might indeed be every way easier and more agreeable for each t own his farm free and unincumbered-not one in a thousand can ever enter this hap py experience without the previous purgatory, as some term it, of years of debt. The capital necessary to acquire a farm, is seldom accumulated by the single exertions of the man with only his pair of hands.-Acquiring such a possession may be compared to laying siege to a fortified town. The assailants can hardly hope to silence all batteries and effect the capture by one effort. They strive first to make a breach, to gain footing in some important point, from which the after operations can be conducted to finally reduce the whole place. So with the young man who has a competence to conquer by his unaided efforts. He must first effect a lodgment upon the desired premises, and then if he have skill and energy he makes the farm assist in securing his possession. Stock, farming ntensils and appliances, which would require all his small capital if purchased at once, can be acquired gradually while on the farm.

But there is another positive advantage in debt under such circumstances which should not be overlooked. It keeps continually before a man an object to be attained. The recollection that interest day is coming and that payments must be met in a stimulus that overcomes the temptation to many an idle hour, calls out the best energy, quickens ingenuity, and promotes economy. A large plaster of debt, well put on, would be a capital application to many a man that is now good for very little, not feeling compelled to work. No doubt a man might do as much, when free from debt, but will be usually ? The man settles upon the place he is striving to secure, is battling for his home, every dollar he pays towards it, is a nail driven to secure its possession to himself and family, and this, if anything, will "bring him out."-Am. Agr.

-----SINGULAR PHYSIOLOGIAL FACT .- The trans ference of vitality which appears to take placs when young persons are habitually placed in contact with the aged is no nurs ery fiction. It is well attested by very competent authorities. "A not uncommon cause," observes Dr. Copeland, "of depressed vitai power, is the young sleeping with the aged. This fact, however, explained, has been long remarked, and it is well known to every unprejudiced observer. 1 have on several occasions, met the coun-terpart of the following case: I was a few years ago consulted, about a sickly and thin boy, of about four or five years of age. He appeared to have no specific ailment, but there was a slow and remarkable decline of flesh and strength, and of the energy or the functions ; what his mother very aptly termed a gradual blight. After inquiry into the history of the case, it came out that he had been a very robust and plethor. ic child, up to his third year, when his grand-mother, a very aged person, took him to sleep with her; that he soon afterwards lost his good looks, and that he continued to decline progressively ever since, notwith-standing medical treatment. I directed him to sleep apart from the aged parent, and prescribed gentle tonics, change of air, &c. The recovery was rapid. But it is not in children only that debility is induced by this mode of abstracting vital power. Young females married to very old men, suffer in similar manner although seldom' to so great an extent ; and instances have come to my
