ARTHUR'S HOME MAGAZINE-1861. With the Dec. No, the Publishers of the Home Magazine announce their purpose to Discase With Its Agonies: give additional value and interest to the work during 1861. Heretofore they have endeavored to make the literary portion of their Magazine, as it should be in all Magazines, the most attractive portion; to hold their readers by the magnetism of mind upon mind, and while thus holding them strongly interested, to give moral as well as intellectual pleasure. In a still higher degree will they aim to impart this quality to the Home Magazine. Additional literary aid, of the right character, will be secured during the year, and the editors will, as heretofore, be in constant communication with their readers giving them the best products of their minds. The publishers do not claim for the Home Magazine anything but what its constant down of the nervous statem?
