How an Army Moves.

There are a great many things besides men and guns, essential to an army, and a commander ought to lead an army into a hostile country, first sees that the commissariat is well provided with provisions...

PLANS FOR THE FUTURE CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

Plans for the future conduct of the war will be produced by some of the New York journalists. The New York Times thinks that a new campaign should be instantly commenced by attacks upon the Southern Atlantic and Gulf ports.

WE HAVE RECEIVED THE FARMER AND GARDENER.

We have received the Farmer and Gardener and the Bee Journal for August. We would recommend them to the public as worthy of their patronage.

The time fixed for the bridge letting at the house of James Masters, in Pine township, has been changed to Friday, the 23rd of August, instead of the 24th as published.

Letter from Camp Bates.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27, 1861. Mr. Editor.—Our Regiment has, as you will perceive by the caption of this letter, left Camp Biddle.

This Camp is situated on the suburbs of the city and near the encampment of the Pennsylvania 7th, which accompanied us from Camp Curtin.

Occasionally we are permitted to visit the city. The Navy Yard seems to attract the attention of many of the soldiers.

While writing the above, I heard a loud report in the direction of the Navy Yard. I have since learned that the Rocket House, by some carelessness of the workmen, has blown up, killing two men and wounding several.

Yours, &c., C. S. H.

Who Overruled General Scott?

The New York Times has the following in relation to a conversation with Gen. Scott, on the Tuesday before the late battle.

On the Tuesday preceding the battle, Gen. Scott, at his first table, in the presence of his aide and a single guest, discussed the whole subject of this war, in all its parts, and with the utmost clearness and accuracy.

If the matter had been left to him, he said he would have commenced by a perfect blockade of every Southern port on the Atlantic coast.

"A large army, splendidly equipped, prepared and furnished at all points under the command of the most experienced General of our times, and sent forth with all the pomp of triumph."

"It is not easy to exaggerate the moral effects of this victory; the confirmation which it gives of the confidence of the Southern people in the power of their arms to uphold the cause of independence."

"These are grand results over which the South may well exult, as fruits on which it has the right to calculate, of its first grand victory and to be devoutly thankful for, as omens that the favor of Heaven will continue to be given to a holy cause."

Every editor of the United States should publish, and every person should read, the following well-considered argument against the practice of economy in time of war, and why money should be put in circulation.

Good Advice.

The State of the times demands liberality and a generous expenditure on the part of those who have the means—whose income is greater than their wants.
