They will not be likely to use efforts to extend the circulation of our paper, when it contains truths hostile to their crafty schemes of anjust gain. It is, therefore, you-you who find in our columns mental food adapted to your wants-it is you who must assist in the great work we are engaged in, by showing and recommending our paper to your friends and acquaintances-by speaki g out boldly as you feel and think-and by patiently persevering in the work Tell those for whom we are laboring with our undiv ded energies, that if they want what justly belongs to them-constitutional liberty-the right to live-and if they think we can aid them in obtaining their rights, they must unitedly, zealously, perseveringly and enniestly assist in sustaining themselves by sustaining us; by diffusing far and wide the trathe we utter for the benefit of the white race and the future prosperity of our now distracted country. We speak not now so much from selfish or interested motives as from a love of our country and humanity, besides a zealous desire to elevate and improve the condition of the toiling millions. Our paper is gaining a tolerably good circulation-few papers published will surpass it in a short time in that respect-but we desire to see its circulation enlarged, not only for the pecuniary advantage it will be to us but on account of the salutary influence it must necessarily exert upon the true interests of those who toil, and in promoting whose terms of service are about to expire, instice, civil liberty, and social equality .-- is no doubt justified by the necessities of This would be the highest compensation we the Government.
