BLOOMSBURG, WEDNESDAY, MAY 18th, 1864

GEORGE B. McLELLAN, Subject to the Decision of the Democratic National Convention.

New Revenue Bill

The Legislature previous to adjournment enacted an important law designed to increase the revenue of the State.

Every private banker and broker, and every bank and savings institution and trust company, gas, bridge, insurance company, and building, manufacturing, mechanical, mining and other company, doing business within the Commonwealth shall pay annually a tax of three per cent of its net earnings.

The corporations liable to duty under the law are required under a heavy penalty to make, through their President or Treasurer, quarterly returns under oath to the Auditor General of the amount of business done.

The present abatement on State tax of five per cent for payment fifteen days before the 1st of September on each year, is no longer allowed, but the Auditor General has directed to add five per cent to all taxes hereafter remaining unpaid after the 1st of August.

The same law also imposes an income tax upon persons holding office in the State by appointment of the Governor, or elected under the provisions of any law of the State, when the salary exceeds six hundred dollars two per cent, exceeding twenty five hundred dollars five per cent.

Another Grand Humbug.—The "loyal" ladies of Washington have formed an organization called "The Ladies' National Covenant," the pledge of which is as follows:—For three years, or for the war, we pledge ourselves to each other and the country to purchase no imported article of apparel.

The editor of the Junata Sentinel lost his pocket book recently, containing one hundred dollars and a railroad pass. The wonder is not so much that he lost that amount as to how he came possessed of it.

We don't pity him in the least for he had no business with that much. Had he been a shoddy contractor we would have been in favor of petitioning the Government to refund it, but he, a Democratic editor, deserves to lose it. It was certainly disloyal for him to have so much money.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Commercial says: "The friends of Mr. Lincoln hereabouts have done all in their power to oppose any postponement of the Baltimore Convention, and they are now sanguine that there will be no deviation from the original programme.

The Bird Law.—The Village Record notices a case where a lad was brought before an alderman in West Chester, last week; and fined for violating the bird law. It was shown that the boy had been destroying birds, by two or three witnesses. The alderman gave him some good advice on the subject of destroying birds at this season of the year.

Lincoln's Thanksgiving Advice.—On the reception of the news from Grant's army, Mr. Lincoln issued his usual royal notice for the people to fall down and praise God. He addresses himself to "The Friends of Union and Liberty," that is, "The Friends of Union and Nigger Liberty," or, in other words, Abolitionists!

Gen. Dick Taylor captured from General Bank's train two wagons loaded with paper collars. The factions rebel returned them under a flag of truce, saying, "I have boiled, fried, baked and stewed these things, and can do nothing with them. We cannot eat them. They are luxury for which we have no use, and I would like, therefore, to exchange them for a like quantity of hard tack."

Another Fire.—Our town was again assailed by the cry of fire, on Sunday morning last. The slaughter-house of Lazarus Moyer, supposed to have been set on fire, was burned down and several head of cattle and sheep were consumed with it.

An Extract from a Soldier's Letter.

"We expect to move on Monday or Tuesday (May 2d or 3d inst) if the weather continues fine. Burnside's corps has joined us, making this army about 120,000 strong, being larger than it ever was before. Burnside has 200 Indians and about 8,000 negroes. The latter will be used to guard the railroads, prisoners &c., and in that manner may be of some use.

Somehow you people at home have an unwholesome fear of Death. There might be some excuse for it, if it was an occasional circumstance, but as every person must die sooner or later, I don't see why so much dread need be felt for the event.

By dying now, perhaps many years of unhappiness might be saved. The fact is, a person at 20 is just as unwilling to become dead as at 20. To speak plainly I would rather be on the battle-field, without a moment's pain or anguish, than be racked with spotted fever, or any other modern disease.

Our system of education is wrong in this, that it teaches us to look upon Death as an evil. If there were no death, soon dreeds would 'live forever, and a good man would wait in vain for the Heaven he desires to attain.

The Hindoo widow with joy burns herself on the funeral pyre, and may a mother thankfully cast her child into the crocodile's mouth. The devotee gladly casts himself under the care of the juggernaut, and the martyr sings joyfully under the most intense torture. This proves conclusively that education, or custom, is the real foundation for this unreasonable dread.

I blame our ministers much for teaching the same thing, when they say that real happiness comes after death, yet dread the approach of happiness in this manner. Again, mothers, if friends know each other hereafter, what is the difference if you go before your son or your son before you? I am induced to write thus because many think it an awful thing to die, when it is merely a stoppage of breath,—a rest for the weary, and the real commencement of our existence."

Firing on Men, Women and Children.—The Chicago papers publish Alexandria (Red River) news, via Cairo, May 5d. One telegram says: Hot work may be expected between here and the mouth of the river, and the scenes that have taken place on the Mississippi may be enacted on Red River. Plantations will doubtless be destroyed indiscriminately, and the torch and cannon be applied to the innocent and guilty alike.

Gunboat Nineteen was fired into 18 miles below Fort de Rosay, as she was conveying a transport. Nobody was hurt yesterday, the steamer Superior was fired into, twenty five miles below here; with cannon and musketry. Three men were killed and eleven wounded.

They were soldiers belonging to the Third Rhode Island Cavalry. A gunboat came to the relief of the Superior, and shelled the woods for miles. Soldiers went ashore and fired some buildings in retaliation. Lieutenant Colonel Parker, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, gave orders to his men, on the Superior, to fire on every white man, woman or child seen on the shore as the best course.

The order was executed. Two or three unarmcd citizens, riding along the shore about fifteen miles below here, waved their hats to the boat as a friendly recognition, but were fired upon and fell from their horses. Houses were shelled along the river. The banks of the Red River are steep and the river narrow. The high levees protect guerrillas with a complete breastwork.

Transport hereafter will go accompanied by gunboats. The Superior was also fired into with cannon at Tunica Landing on the east side of the Mississippi River, fifteen miles below the mouth of Red River. Twelve shells were thrown at her. Eleven struck and went diagonally through her cabin. One shell went through her pilot house. The Superior was very roughly handled. Five cannon shots and shells struck her on the way up here, and a hundred musket balls.

Almost a Murder by an Insane Woman.—An insane woman named Northrop, residing in Franklin township, attacked and nearly murdered Mrs. Weston, (wife of the late Dr. Weston) a few days since. It appears that Mrs. W. and the deranged woman met on the road, when the latter said that she was then going to kill John, (Mrs. W.'s son), and as Mrs. Weston turned to leave her, was struck a blow on the head with a club which fell her to the ground. She was then beaten and pounded by the crazy woman, until it is supposed she was left for dead. When Mrs. Weston was discovered, she was completely covered with blood, and had several cuts about the head. At last accounts she was slowly recovering. Mrs. Weston is a very mild, lady like woman, and had never given her assailant any cause for the cruel treatment.—Bradford Reporter.

The Losses in Virginia.

Whatever may be the result of the campaign in Virginia, it is certain that Lieutenant General Grant's peculiar tactics will insure the greatest possible sacrifice of life. He evidently relies less upon strategic combinations than hard fighting. It was by this mode that he won Fort Donelson, which first made him prominent. Then, with a largely superior force, his attacks were repeated, until the Confederates, from pure exhaustion, surrendered. The army that he is now fighting, however, are veteran soldiers, with powers of resistance and endurance equal to his own; and may it not be possible that he will exhaust the strength and destroy the morale of his troops by continuous assaults against fortified positions which might be won by strategy.

The series of battles fought during the past week were among the most sanguinary of the war; and it is not an unreasonable estimate to place his losses already at forty thousand men. Indeed, it probably exceeds that amount. The mortality in musketry battles is far greater than when artillery is used. In a conflict of this character the usual estimated loss is one per centum killed, to three and a half or four per centum wounded. It will be remembered that the great battles of Thursday and Friday in the wilderness were fought at musketry range, and but little artillery was engaged. The number of Federals wounded in those engagements, is said to have been fifteen thousand. The loss in killed, therefore, would reach nearly four thousand. The conflicts that have followed seem to be less bloody. The very heavy loss of general officers indicates desperate fighting. Up to this time the Federals have lost Generals Sedgwick, Wadsworth, Owens Rice, Barlow, and Stevenson, killed; Webb, Robinson, Getty, Morris, and Baxter, wounded, and Talbot, Neil, Shaler, and Seymour, prisoners.—New York Daily News.

Lt. Col. Orr, of the 84th P. V., was killed in the late fight near Spotsylvania Court House. His body was brought home, at Manassas, a few days since, for interment. He was commanding this veteran Regiment, in the absence of Colonel Bowman, who has been on detached service for some time. Col. Orr was one of the first members of this Regiment, an excellent soldier, and a man in every respect. He leaves a young wife and small family, besides many connections and friends, to mourn his loss. He is one among the many valuable young Democrats who have laid down their lives in this accursed rebellion.

The Republican of last week treated its readers with news of most cheering character—the taking of Richmond by Ben Butler and the demolishing of Fort Darling.—Now, the fact is, neither place has yet been taken by our arms, and before that is accomplished we may look for more hard fighting. But the Republican will not inform its readers of the incorrectness of the war news as published last week. This is the second time the Republican had Richmond taken. Many of its readers in the country will not be the wiser unless they read some Democratic paper. They will soon begin to think that the Rebels have a good many Richmonds.

The Republican last week had something to say about "cooperheads," "traitors at heart," &c. Now Thomas Dunn has never proved his loyalty except to woman! He is a bright specimen in calling his neighbors slanderous names, accusing them of sympathizing with the men who are trying to destroy the Government. This is yet a question with the people, who those men are that are destroying the government, whether they are Lincoln and party of Jerry Davis. So far Lincoln, the Government, has not brought one single State back into the Union, but has, through his proclamations, driven several out. The rebellion, in his hands, has grown at a fearful rate! If he is trying to restore the Union as it was, under a different policy; especially, after having prosecuted the war over three years, killing so many men and piling up such a huge debt, without any good results.

Drowned.—A boy about nine years of age, son of Mary Ann Getkien, was drowned in the Susquehanna River at Cattawissa, on Friday, the 6th inst.

His clothing worn at the time was a check shirt, dark pants and a light roundabout and no shoes. Any person finding the said boy will confer a great favor upon his mother by giving her the information, so that she may obtain it.

To Wounded Soldiers.—All Soldiers who have been discharged by reason of wounds received in any battle, and who have not received the One Hundred Dollars Bounty, can receive the same now at once, by applying either in person or by letter, at the Military and Naval Agency, No. 427 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

Joseph E. Devitt & Co. PRIZE MONEY.—A full list of all Prizes payable to date can be seen at the offices. These and all other claims against the Government promptly collected. May 18, 1864.—2t

LATE WAR NEWS.

FROM MONDAY AND TUESDAY'S PAPERS. The Confederates in front of Gen. Grant have taken up a new line of defence just south of the Po, and twenty miles from the North Anna. On Friday there was no fighting. Gen. Butler has advanced to Fort Darling and begun a siege, and Gen. Sheridan has joined him.

The battle at Spotsylvania which was fought on Thursday last is now fully explained. The Confederate position was on the North Anna; the western flank on the Po, which at that point runs a short distance south, afterwards curving around in the rear of the town. Burnside was on the Federal eastern flank; Wright, west of Burnside, and the rest of the army, on the North Anna. Hancock's position was in the rear of the town.
