OLD BANKS are last becoming National Banks. Why is this ? Is it because the establishing of these National Banks throughout the whole North has a tendency to break down the State Banks ? It would look so. A few days ago we noticed that the "Bank of Danville" has changed its title to that of the "Danville National Bank," This is one of the safest, and all times the most reliable, Banks in the country. This instifution stands well at home and abroad ; and has always maintained, through storm and eunshine, while other institutions were toppling and reeling, a good reputation.

TO THE PATRONS OF THE STAR .- We dislike very much to "dun" out patrons, and we have refrained from doing so for some time past, but as some of them are very slow in settling their bills, we are compelled to put forth this gentle reminder. We have a considerable amount due us, on out books and as we have obligations to meet, we trust that those indebted will either call and settle or remit the amount. We dislike sending bills, and we trust none will procrastinate so long as to make this necessary. The approaching term of Court will afford a good opportunity for delinquents to send
