The correspondence between the United States and France, in reference to questions which have become subjects of discussion between the two Governments, will, at a proper time, be laid before Congress.

When on the organization of our Government, under the Constitution, the President of the United States delivered his inaugural address to the two Honses of Congress he said address to the two Houses of Congress he said to them; and through to them to the country and to mankind; that "the preservation of the secred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government, are justly considered as deeply, perhaps as finally staked on the experiment intrusted to the American people."

And the House of Representatives and the House of Representatives and the state of the state

- We adore the invisible band which has led the American people through so many difficulties, to cherish a conscious responsibillty for the destiny of republican liberty." More than seventy-six years have glided away since these words were spoken; the gited States have passed through severer trials than were foreseen; and now, at this och in our existence as one nation, with our Union purified by sorrows, and atrengthened by conflict, and catablished by the virtue of the people, the greatness of the occasion invites us once more to repeat with solemnity, the pledges of our fathers to hold answerable before our fellowmen for ess of the republican form of gov-Experience has proved its sufficiency in

Other nations were wasted by civil ware for ages before they could establish for themselves the necessary degree of unity; the latent conviction that our form of Government is the best ever known to the world, has combled us to emerge from civil war within four years, with a complete vindication of the constitutional authority of the General Government, and with our local liberties and State institutions unimpaired.

The throngs of emigrants that crowd to our shores are witnesses of the confidence of all peoples of our permanence. Here is the great land of free labor, where industry is used with unexampled rewards, and the bread of the workingman is sweetened by the consciousness that the cause of the country "is his own cause, his own safety, his own dignity." Here every one enjoys the free use of his faculties and the choice of activity as a natural right. Here, under the combined influence of a fruitful soil, genial climes and happy institutions, population has in-creased fifteen-fold within a century.

Principles of 1776 and '87.

C. CHAUNCEY BURR, EDITOR.

This Magazine will continue to defend the principles of Government which guided our fathers in the foundation of the Republic. The spirit and doctrine of the two first volumes will be fully maintained in the third volume. We have no compromises to make with error-no parley with despotism. Democracy will be treated, not as a varying policy of cunning office. seekers and speil-hunters, but rather as an abiding principle of political economy and of popular liberty. All supporters of this revolutionizing, Abolition war, will be held as the enemies of the Democracy. We shall acknowledge no organization to be Democratic which does not honestly enon ciate and support the principles of the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions of 1798 and the Dred Scott Decision of the Supreme Court, the one asserting State Sovereignly and the other White supremacy. To preserve these honorable doctrines, the Democratic party was organized by the very founders of the Federal Government. and it remained true to them down to the tatal and dishonoring departure, at the commencement of this war. The Old Guard is an organ of Democracy as it was, before this cowardly sturender of principle and as it must be again, before it can redeem our country from the rule of faction and despotism. This year it has been enlarged to double its former size-that is, to forty eight pages-for the purpose of making it in all respects, as to style and matter
