THE CARRIER'S ADDRESS TO THE EDITORS OF THE STAR AND BANNER, JANUARY 1, 1848.

KIND PATRONS: WATKIN, gladness to-day steps lightly around thee. And broken the chains of care which had bound thee.

While visions of bliss are flitting before thee, Which, mingled in sorrow, still shall remain; Turn holy in thought to another year's end, Unwept for, away where the Past waits her dead.

It requires no marble nor gorgeous tear: Its sorrows, its glories, both shall appear. When History opens her triumphant page, Bright with the glorious fruits of this age.

With a warrior's nerve and a conqueror's pride 'Twill stem the rough waves of oblivion's tide. 'Mid the shrieks of the wounded and dying it walks, While fearful hung round the battle's thick smoke, And amidst in death by the victor and foe, Enshrined on the dust plains of Cerro Gordo.

But there will the eagle of victory soar 'Till the standard the bears is spotted no more! Inscribed on its page, though frightful and gory, WIZARD and ZACARAY—equal in glory.

The Genius which led him in fierce fight, Fearful and grand as the storm in its might, Hovers triumphant o'er the President's chair, And calls on our Champion to follow her there.

Silently vanishing, its last day has gone, And the dread of succession comes hat'ning on; But the horrible voice from Mexico's plains Yet chills the blood in humanity's veins.

While he whose blind impotence struck the first blow, Would mangle the form of a prostrated foe! The Orphan shall curse him—the Widow invoke Justice' torture on him who ruthlessly broke On the peace which had nestl'd so long in her home.

And planted dark sorrow where pleasure had grown. A nation must charge him with digging a grave, Where sleep the cold forms of her noble and brave. A nation must charge him, now in her last throes, As the cause of all her misfortune and woes.

But when where he trembles o'er Hero shall stand, Golden hours will spring to the stroke of his wand, And dull joy in slumber of enchanting asp. Then too, with a giant's strength, Cozzas shall seize The steeds of State burning, which Strux has long tried.

With valiant endeavor, through glory to guide, Internal improvement—the pride of your hands, And first in importance—attention demands: Behold! every manumission countess of his steam Of electric impell'd by machinery unceasing.

No longer will summer's third burning invade Where dashes in beauty the private cascade. Ye who have been started in downcast dream, When wildly and piercing the reveiler's scream Rode horribly strange on the dead of the night—Sleep soundly hereafter: the Constable's might, By flogging and caging, has set all right.

And ye who inhabit a native brightness, Whose forms, like clouds of the morning in light-gleams, Bear a spirit of beauty wherever they move, Which turns all it touches straightway into love: If a Carrier's wishes are welcome to you, Believe me, you'll never find any more true.

To all of both sexes—a happy NEW YEAR! Life lightest around you—of sorrow no fear—May virtue with roses fresh scatter your way, And make each succeeding your happiest day! E'en now let meek Charity gain your first joy, By giving a FEE to the CARRIER BOY. A HUSBAND IN A BAG; OR POPPING THE QUESTION.

BY MISS JOSE JONES, OF PITTSVILLE. PITTSVILLE, Dec. 27, 184—

To Mr. THOMPSON: Dear Sir—Christmas is over, and the thing's did. You know I told you in my last letter I was going to bring Miss Mary down to the chink a Crismus. Well, I done it, slick as a whistle, though it come mighty nigh being a serious undertakin'.

But I'll tell you all about the whole circumstance. The factis, I's made my mind up more'n twenty times to jest go and come right out with the whole business, but whenever I got whar she was, and whenever she looked at me with her wickin' eyes, and kind o' blushed at me, I always felt sort o' skeered and fainty, and all I made up to tell her was, for you a married man, Mr. Thompson, so I couldn't tell you nothing about popping the question, as they call it. Its a mighty grav' fever, as they call it, its a mighty hard, don't it? They say widgers don't mind it no more'n nothin'. But I'm makin' a transgression, as the preacher sez.

Crismus eve I put on my new suit, and shaved my face as slick as a smoothin' iron, and went over to old Miss Stallins. As soon as I went into the parlor whar they was all settin' round the fire, Miss Caroline and Miss Keshiah both laughed right out.

"There, there," sez they, "I told you so; I knew it would be Joseph."

"What's I done, Miss Caroline?" sez I. "You come under little sister's chicken bone, and I do believe she knew you was comin' when she put it over the door."

"No I didn't—I didn't no such thing, now," sez Miss Mary, and her face blushed red all over.

"Oh, you needn't deny it," sez Miss Keshiah: "you long to Joseph, now, jest as sure as there's any charm in chicken-bones."

I knowd that was a fast rate chance to say something, but the dear little creature looked so sorry and kept blushin' so, I couldn't say nothin' zactly to the pint, so I took a chair and reached up and tucked down the bone and put it in my pocket.

"What are you going to do with that old bone, now, Major?" sez Mary. "I'm gwine to keep it as long as I live," sez I, "as a Crismus present from the hand-somest gal in Georgia."

When I sed that, she blushed worse and worse.

"Aint you ashamed, Major?" sez she. "Now you ought to give her a Crismus gift, Joseph, to keep all her life," sez Miss Caroline.

"Ah," sez old Miss Stallins, "when I was a gal we used to hang up our stockings."

"Why, mother?" sez all of 'em, "to say stockings this slow?"

"Then I felt a little skeered too, 'cause they was all blushin' as hard as they could. 'Highly-don't,' sez the old lady—'what monstrous-foolment! I'd like to know what-harm there is in stockings. People now-a-days is gittin' so mealy-mouthed they can't call nothin' by its rite name, and I don't see as they's any better than the old time people was. When I was a gal like you, child; I used to hang up my stockings and git 'em full of presents."

"The galls kept laughin'."

"Never mind," sez Miss Mary. "Major's got to give me a Crismus gift—won't you, Major?"

"Oh, yes," sez I, "you know I promised you one."

"But I didn't mean that," sez she. "I've got to give you, what I want you to keep all your life, but it would take a two-bushel bag to hold it," sez I.

"Oh, that's the kind," sez she. "But will you keep it 'as long as you live?" sez I.

"Certainly I will, Major."

"Monstrous fine ment now a day—old people don't know nothin' but politeness," said old Miss Stallins, jest gwine to sleep with her nittin in her hand.

"Now you hear that, Miss Caroline," sez I, "she sez she'll keep it all her life."

"Yes, I will," sez Miss Mary—but "never mind," sez I: "you hang up a bag big enough to hold it, and you'll find out what it is, when you see it in the mornin'."

"Miss Caroline winked at Miss Keshiah, and then whispered to her—then they both laughed and looked at me as mischievous as they could. They spicqued something."

"You'll be sure to give it to me now, if I hang up a bag," sez Miss Mary. "And promise to keep it," sez I.

"Well, I will, cause I know that you wouldn't give me nothin' that wasn't worth keepin'."

She all agreed they would hang up a bag for me to put Miss Mary's Crismus present in, in the back porch, and about nine-o'clock I told 'em good evinin' and went home.

I set up till midnight, and when they was all gone to bed I went softly into the back gate, and went up to the porch, and thar, shore enuff, was a grate big mealy-bag, hangin' on the jice. It was monstrous unhandy to git to it, but I was determined not to bark out. So I set some chairs on top of a bench and got hold of the rope and let myself down into the bag; but jest as I was gettin' in, the bag swung again the chairs, and down they went with a terrible racket. But nobody did nothin' but get up but old Miss Stallins sez big curdog, and here he cum rippin and terrin through the yard like rath, and round and round he went trying to find what was the matter. He set down in the bag and did't breathe louder nor a kitten, for fear he'd find me out, and after awhile he got back in. The widge bled but turn, abominably cold, and the old bag kept turnin' round and swingin' so it made me sick as the mischief. I was afraid to move for fear the rope would brake and let me fall, and there I sat with my teeth-trin like I had a ager.

It seemed like it would never come daylight, and I do believe if I didn't love Miss Mary so powerful I would have froze to death for my hart was the only spot that felt warm, and it didn't bark nothin' but widge a minute, only when I thought how long it would be spiced in the mornin', and then it went in a center. Bimeby the cussed old dog come up on the porch and began to smell about the bag, and then he barked like he thought he'd tread something.

"Bow I waw! waw!" Then he'd smell agin, and try to git up to the bag—"Git out!" sez I, very low, for fear they would hear me. "Bow I waw! waw!" "Be gone, you abominable fool," sez I, and I felt all over in spots; for I speced every minit he'd nip me, and 'what made it worse, I didn't know whar boots he'd take hold."

"Bow I waw! waw!" Then I tried cootin'—"Come here, good fellow!" I sed, and whistled a little to him but he was no use. Thar he stood and kept up his eternal whinin and barkin, all night. I couldn't tell when daylight was breakin' mostly by the chicken crows, and I was monstrous glad to hear 'em, for if I had to stay there one hour more, I don't believe I'd ever got out of that bag alive."

Old Miss Stallins come out fast, and as soon as she saw the bag, she sez: "What upon yeath has Joseph went and put in that bag for Mary? I'll lay it's a yearlin or some live animal, or Bruin wouldn
