Books for the American People.

THE FOLLOWING
VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS
Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can employ their time in supplying to the People of the United States.

They are indispensable as books of reference to our Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures.

and should be possessed by all the young men of this great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our halls of Legislation. There is not a citizen in the United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are the sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicle of A. J. RICHMOND.

Agents are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with, and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.
The plan of the publication is so successfully carried on for several years, in the obtaining responsible men as agents, who are well known in their own counties, towns, and villages, and have found and discovered that the good and useful literature among their neighbors and friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will be discovered that they are adapted to the Christian, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will not be sending to the publisher $50, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for his trouble.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
[From the American Signal.]
"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid volume, entitled '1776', published by E. Walker, of New York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the reader back to the period when the Continental Army was marshaled to defend our native land. We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless blessing of our liberty."
[From the New York Express.]
"The book is elegantly printed, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in his department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."
[From the Evening Mirror.]
"This is the title of a very elegant-looking book of some 500 pages, published by Edward Walker, 114 Fulton street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and matter are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount of variety of information relating to the revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which would do honor to any extensive sale."
[With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflection, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent references to the original authorities, it is a volume entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian. EDWARD WALKER.]
[From the Albany Spectator.]
"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which need not be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom and the inalienable rights of man."
[From the Knickerbocker Magazine.]
"The enterprising and patriotic publisher of this excellent and beautiful volume will surely find that he has not misjudged, in believing that a book in one volume, well written, and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which have shaped the destinies of a people, and the fate of the great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations."
