My heart has yearned like other hearts, With all the fervor Youth imparts ; And all the warmth that Feeling lends Has freely cherished "troops of friends Has treedy chernanda "troops of mendo" A change has passed o'er them sind me, We are not as we used to be; My heart like many snother heart, Sees old companions all depart. I mark the names of more than one.

But read them on the cold white stone ; And steps that followed where mine led, Now on the far off desert tread : The world has warped some souls away. MY OLD COMPANIONS.

BY ELIZA COOK.

And there are daisies peeping out, And dog-rose blossoms round about. Ye were my friends, "long, long ago," The first bright friends I sought to know, And yet ye come-rove where I will, My old companions, fuithful still. And there are sunheams rich and fair,

As cheering as they over were : And there are iresh winds playing nigh, As freely as in time gone by ; The birds come singing as of yore, The waves yet ripple to the shore ; Howe'er I feel, where'er I range, These old companions never change. I'm glad I loved to learn the things That Fortune-neither takes nor brings I'm glad my spirit learned to prize

The smiling face of sunny skies ; 'Twas well I clasp d with doting hand The balmy wild flowers of the land ; For still ye live in friendship sure, My old companions, bright and pure.

Though strong may be the ties we make, The strongest mortal tie may break ; Though warm the lips that love us now, They may perhaps forswear the vow ; We see pale death and envious Hate, Fling shadows on the dusi plate ; Noting the hours when dark sands glide. And old companions leave our side. But be we sad, or be we gay, With thick curls bright, or thin locks gray, We never find the spring bloom meet

Our presence with a smile less sweet. Oh! I am glad I learned to love The tangled word and cooing dove; For these will be in good or ill My old companions, changeless still.

last peep in the prettily amanged, halfshadowed rooms, where the sub-light was leaving his last golden gleamings, Kate drew the curtains into a more graceful droop, and with a half gay, sad smile, sprang up stairs, followed by cousin Alice and myself to don her bridal attire.

Soon the long black curls were sweeping over the faultless shoulders, and our fing ers were rapidly threading the luxuriant mass, as we performed the office of tirewomen. Ere an hour had elapsed, the little chamber contained the most radiantly beautiful being I ever beheld. A simple press of white muslin fell in snowy folds around her graceful figure, leaving the beautiful neck and arms just discernible through the gossamer trimmings of rich blond. The raven ringlets were not flowing in their usual style, but caright away from the shoulders, and fell, half shading the face with a tiny wreath of snow-berries and myrtle. After pressing a kiss of mingled love and admiration upon Kate's torchead, cousin Alice, who was to officiate as bridesmaid, tripped lightly down stairs, and soon returned with Mrs. Allen. "Oh Kate, my beautiful one, so soon the man who could say, "I am contented." to leave me forever," murmured the moth-Go where you will, among the rich or the er, as the impulsive Kate sprang into her poor, the man of competence or the man embrace, to the sad disherelment of the
