Robin's Come. From the elm-tree's topmost bough, Hark I the Robin's early song Telling one and all that now Merry Spring-time hastes along ;
Welcome tidings thou dost bring, Little harbinger of Spring.
Robin's come !

Of the Winter we are weary. Weary of its frost and snow.
Longing for the sunshine cheery,
And the brooklet's gurging flow;
Gladit then we hear thee sing The leveille of the Spring.

Ring it out o'er hill and plain. Through the garden a lottely bowers, Till the green leaves dance again: Wake the cowslips by the rill, Wake the yellow Daffodill I Robin's come I Then, as thou wert wont of yore. Build thy nest and cear thy young,

Close beside our cottage door, In the woodblue leaves among. Hurt nor harm thou needlet not fear, Nothing rade shall venture near. Robin's come !! Swinging still on vonder lane, Robin answers merrily !

Ravished by the awest refrain,
Alice clasps her hands with glee,
Calling from the open door
With her soft voice, her said o'er;

The Burial and the Bridal. BY JAMES MONTGOMERY.

"Rubin's come!"

Blessed is the bride whom the sun shines on : Blessed is the corpse which the run roins on. I saw thee young and beautiful, I saw thee rich und gay; In the first blash of womanhood, Upon thy wedding day !! "

The church bells rang, And, he little children song.
Flowers, flowers, k ise her feet;
Sweets to the sweet!
The winter is just, the rain is gone. Biessed is the bride whojin the sun shines on.".

I saw thee poor and desolate, I saw thee fude away.
In broken-lichted willowhood, Before thy locks were grey The death belt rang, And the little children sang — "Lilies dress her winding sheet :

This world is a great dice-box, and noody can tell what will "turn up" at the next throw. There are incident and remance enough transpiring every day in the streets of the metropolis, to furnish muterial for the poet and novelist to the

Yesterday afternoon, a well dressed gentleman was passing up Broadway. Foronce fair a tinge of bronze, and though nearly, half a century might have rolled over his head, yet it had left few traces behind it, and no evidences that the shad-own were fulling far, to the eastward. Near Trinity Church sat an old anote voman. A tattered cloak of plaid was thrown oper her shoulders, her ayes were dim, her hand trembled, and the thin grey hair, ergaping from a gap guilileas of lace. lay upon her cheek. The old woman was watching for purchasers, and her sys rested upon the form of a stranger us he proceeded deisurely along, pausing now nd then as he seemingly recognized some spot familiar in other days, or noted some nnexpected, and to him, doubtless, painful

The old woman suddenly, drapped hor basket and the apples rolled hither and thither, but she did not heed them .--"George !" she exclaimed, as she sprang to her feet, "George !" The stranger turned in the direction of the voice. In an instant his quiet manner vanished,-"George I" "Mother I" and the twain were clasped in each others arous .--Greatly did some wonder at the scene. -Has the old woman fainted ?" cried one. Has she been stealing?" usked anothers Yes she has been steeling-stealing whole years from Time, and flinging it to the winds. But fone touch of nature makes the whole world kin," and there was many a heart beat softer at the scene. Twenty years ago "George had left his home in Utica, New York, and gone "flown to the sea;" and done business on the great waters. Atter varied fortunes, which brightened at last, he had returned to find the old homestead razed to the ground, a block of stores occupying just site, every inch of which had been deapto. him-but an old man pointed out to him his father's grave. It was sunken and without a stone to mark where he lay,-Of his mother he could obthin no trace. She had left Utica long ago to seek heri home to the streets, old age and poveerty ! But yesterday it was all made right, "the dead was alive again and the lost was: found." and to-day who thinks she would exchange places with the most favored of. fortune that dwell in maneions of marble? God grant that much joy break not the nitcher at the fountain or the wheel at the cistern, God grant many such meeting in this world of partings. The Violin trick.

Some days ago there presented himself. hefore a dealer in curtosites, at the Palais Royal, a young man poorly clothed. Sit." said he, showing a violin which he carried, "I am a musics cartistit; this is the wearn of balls and sorres gel liave just had a long illness, which has exhausted my purse; my only black cont is, in pawa; I would be much obliged if you will lend me ten francs to redeem it. would leave as security one of the viol lins you see, for lihave two. It is an excellent instrument a l. will return to take it again, as soon as, thanks to my cust. L. shall have carned some money at balls and, parties." The young man had such an honest bearing that the dealer lent him ten france and kept the violin, which he hung up in his shop.

The next day but one, a gentleman, well. dressed, wearing at his button hole the riband of the legion of honor, was choose ing from the dealer's stock of goods some; shell work. Seeing the violin, he took it. up, examining it narrowly. What is the price of this instrument?" said he. M. is not mine," replied the shop-keeper ; and, he telsted how he came to possess it ----. "This yiolin," continued the unknown, Misworth money, it is a Cremona, Perhaps warriors. This youth, who is a native of he, will be obliged, and who can play just rounte country in the interior of Asia as well on another violin." Then handwill keep that for yourself if the affair pented, bringing the ten france to reducing his ciulin, for which the dealer offered. him two hundred france. After some hear
