I Cannot call her Mother. BY SARAH T. BOLTON.

The matriage rite is over, And though I turned aside, To keep the guests from seeing The tears I could not hide ; I wreathed my face in smiling, And led my little brother To greet my father's chosen. But I could not call her mother.

She is a fair young creature, With a meek and gentle air, With blue eyes soft and loving, And silken sunny hair-I know my father gives her The love he bote another, But if she were an angel I could not call her mother.

To night I heard ber singing song I used to low When its sweet notes were uttered By her who sings above ; It pained my heart to hear it, And my tears I could not an For every word was hallowed By the dear voice of my mother.

My father, in the sunshine Of happy days to come May half forget the shadow That darkened our old home; His heart no more is lonely, But I and little brother Must still be orphan children-God can give us but one mothe
