BY MRS. HEMANS. Thou'rt bearing hence thy roses, Glad summer fare thee well;

Thou 'rt singing thy last melodies In every wood and dell. But ere the golden sunset

Of thy latest lingering day, Oh, tell me, o'er this chequered earth, How hast thou past away ? Brightly, awest Summer, brightly !

Thine hours have floated by,
To joyous birds of woodland boughs,
The rangers of the sky. And brightly in theforests, To the wild deer wandering free, And brightly midst the garden flowers, To the happy humming bee.

But how to human bosoms, With all their hopes and fears, And thoughts that make them eagle-wings, To pierce the unborn years ? Sweet summer! to the captive

Thou hast flown in burning dreams Of thewoods, with all their whispering leaves And the blue rejoicing streams. To the wasted and the weary,

On the bed of sickness bound. In swift delirious fantacies, That changed with every sound. The sailor on the billows

Is longing wild and vain. For the gushing founts and breezy hills And the homes of earth again. And unto me, glad Summer!

How hast thou flown to me ! My chainless footsteps naught has kept From my haunts of song and glee. Thou hast flown in way ward visions, In memories of the lead, In shadows from a troabled heart,

O'er thy sunny pathway shed. In brief and sunny strivings
To fling a weight saids—
'Midst these thy melodies have ceased

And all thy roses died. But, oh, thou gentle Summer If I greet thy flowers oute more, Bring me again the buoyancy Wherewith my soul should soar.

Give me to hail thy aunshine With song and Spirit free, Or in a purer air than this May that next meeting be.
