The Duc de Gammont, who was lost in the Arctic, had made arrangements for sailing in another steamer, a considerable time previous to his departure for the U nited States. Some unforseen events, Louis Aulabaugh, of Mesherystown, however, detained him. He then engaged to sail in still another vessel than the Arctic, but unexpected circumstances overruled him, and, as if governed by a hidden but inexorably destiny, he went on board the ship that was to bear him to his tomb.
