BASEBALL PLAYERS HAVE HEARING TO-DAY

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 6.—With the arrival to-day of the committee representing the Baseball Players' Fraternity, the National Baseball Commission and magnates depending on the decision of this tribunal faced a very interesting question. The players' fraternity have submitted a number of requests which they believe will better the conditions under which they work.

To most of these the club owners and officials of major and minor leagues have no objection but a few were debated earnestly previous to the meeting of the National Commission. The delegation from the players' fraternity consisted of David Fultz, president; John Miller, of the St. Louis Nationals; Jacob Daubert, of the Brooklyn Nationals; John Henry, of the Washington Americans and Ray Collins, of the Boston Americans.

BASEBALL ENIGMAS BY GOVERNOR TENER

Bunch From a Running Interview With the National Leader in the New York World

When Governor John K. Tener, the National League president talks about baseball, it is a lengthy interview. The word he speaks will be read. Throughout the United States the impression prevails that because Governor Tener is in active baseball again, there will be a new era in the history of the national game.

In the magazine of the New York World on Sunday, Governor Tener is prominent in a lengthy interview. Here are a few epigrams bunched from Governor Tener's statement: "The American spirit is typified by the National League."

"Phrases taken from the language of baseball enrich the vocabulary of success. Making a hit and 'putting one over' are generally accepted and widely popular forms of expressing accomplishments."

"Baseball, like the Constitution, follows the flag. The impact of the willow adage, the horseshoe superstition is heard around the world. There are scoreboards in London, Paris, Berlin, Guam, Hongkong and Tokio, and rooters in Gallant known tongue."

"Gallant Commodore Perry opened the ports of Japan to American commerce, and globe trotting nines opened the parks of Japan to the great American game. This is the peaceful message of New World civilization carried to ancient peoples."

"Modern civility finds one of its allies in baseball. Executive, judicial and legislative branches of government year after year are recruited from the diamond. President Wilson was a ballplayer; so was President Taft. The distinguished Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States never varies in his loyal support of the game, and so it is all along the line."

"If we were to have another escutcheon to express the popular side of national life, and the design were to be decided by popular vote, it would be two bats crossed, with a fielder's mitt set in the upper right and the sawbuck and a catcher's mask underneath."

"Taking the game as it is played—professional, semi-professional, college, schoolboy scrub and one-old-cat—there are in all probability a million Americans who find pleasure in participation in it. And there are other millions in the United States who find pleasure in watching it and bleachers and on the side lines."

"Whenever men seek relaxation, bankers, brokers, employes of business houses, mills, shops and factories, they turn naturally to the national game. Baseball is the big event at every outing, and it is more important than the fireworks on the Fourth of July. Fat men play the game, the tall play the shorties, the married men play the single men, the bookkeepers play the sales department, and so on. It's the great inspirational contest in every State in the Union, every county in the State and every town in the country."

"If all the ballplayers in the country were organized into an army, they would form a force that would be invincible. They would be a defense against the armies of the world."

"No event in the country's regular calendar is of such vital import to the masses of the people as a world series contest. No helmet is too remote not to receive a flash of the result, no community too engrossed in its immediate personal affairs not to join with the crowd anxious to find out who won. The message that is flashed to the White House is duplicated to the backwoods of Maine, to the Everglades of Florida, to the ranches in Texas and to the fruit belt of Oregon. Even the Indians in far off Saskatchewan come down one-hundred and fifty miles to Portland to get the news and take it back to their people."

"We may look for international baseball. It is bound to come. Already the game is played around the world. The Waseda College team of Tokio defeated the University of Pennsylvania team last season. The Chinese team from the University of Honolulu beat a strong semi-professional team. The big games will come along. International yachting, gold, polo, tennis and shooting are now on the world's card. As a development of the Olympic spirit we will have the world's baseball and the contest for supremacy will be the most momentous event of the time."

The question of employing an attorney for the board will be looked up. The county authorities will also look into the matter of having the State care for the thirty-two insane patients now at the almshouse.

TEACHERS HEAR FIRST OF SERIES OF LECTURE

The University of Pennsylvania last night inaugurated its new system of free extension courses for the higher professional training of the teachers of Pennsylvania in the opening of a lecture course, given by Professor A. Duncan Yocum, in Technical High school, on "Efficiency in the Material and Method of Teaching." About a hundred teachers from Harrisburg, Steelton and neighboring counties have pledged themselves to take the course.

Superintendent Garver, of Dauphin county, was among the first to enroll, while Superintendents Downs and McGinnis have done everything in their power to make the new move a success. Similar lecture courses will soon be opened at Williamsport and Altoona. Dr. Yocum holds the chair of educational research and practice at the university.

TENER IS PRAISED FOR SELECTIONS

Philadelphia Says That Appointments on Charitable Commissions Are Good

The Philadelphia Public Ledger of yesterday contained the following regarding the appointments to commissions made Friday by Governor Tener: "Governor Tener's appointments to the four charities commissions were generally approved yesterday by the Public Charities Association, which was the sponsor for the bills and in whose office they were drafted. It was said by officials of the association that the creation of these boards meant a new era for Pennsylvania in the care of the dependent imbeciles."

"Stanley H. Howe, educational secretary of the association, said in discussing the appointments: "We are much gratified by the action of the Governor in appointing these commissions, and particularly with his selections for the colony for feeble-minded women of child-bearing age. This is one of the most important steps forward that the State has ever taken. It commits the State to a new policy in which prevention, rather than care of feeble-minded persons, will be the keynote. This colony should be established on State land as near Harrisburg as possible, in order that members of the Legislature can visit it and see what is being done. It is our hope that immediate steps will be taken to establish the colony and erect the buildings so that by the time the next Legislature assembles the colony will be ready. We have now from 90 to 100 women ready to enter it."

"The Legislature appropriated $40,000 for the erection of buildings for the housing of such women, but did not provide any funds for maintenance. This will come later, but Mr. Howe believes that eventually the colony can be made self-supporting, as in some other States. Mr. Howe said: "There are three grades of women who will be cared for. The first is the low grade idiot, who is absolutely helpless and must even be fed. Second comes the imbecile, who can help herself to some extent, but is not entirely self-supporting. Third comes the moron, who under proper training can be taught to do work that will support her and earn enough surplus to support the others."

"Moron," it is explained, is a term applied to women of low mentality, who lack all moral principle. Mr. Howe continued: "It is the plan of these measures to prevent the creation of imbeciles. It is just as possible to eliminate the feeble-minded as it is to eliminate smallpox. Of course, those who are with us must be cared for, but measures should be taken to prevent future generations from supplying others, and the creation of these various boards is the first big step that Pennsylvania has taken with that end in view."

"It is believed that this first step of the State will be followed by others and the policy pushed until, when another generation grows up, there will be but few women or men who are mentally incapable, and therefore, a burden upon the community."
