Truth Telling

Advertisements

Quite a natural text for a little talk on the anniversary of Wash-ington's birthday.

There is some sentiment and also good, plain, business sense in the idea that an advertisement must be an exact statement of fact — that it must be without exaggeration.

The old policy of "let the buyer beware", has become obsolete. In the same way the tendency to have alluring advertising with-out the goods to back it up has gone into the discard.

"It did not pay.

There is more care exercised to-day in the preparation of an advertisement than ever before.

People are greater readers of advertising than ever before, and are more severe critics.

They know the ring of the true om the noise of the counterfeit. The advertising in the good newspapers like the Telegraph is subjected to careful scrutiny. Publishers are jealous of the character of their columns. Standards are getting higher — the business world is getting more exacting in its ideals and its practices.
