Passing Impressions of Finance

By Louis Guenther, Editor of the Financial World

The shadows of Villa, the Mexican rebel leader, loomed menacingly over the market all last week. His act of shooting the British subject, Benton, has occasioned the gravest concern in diplomatic circles and if it is shown that the Englishman was wantonly shot down, President Wilson may in the end be forced to change his waiting attitude towards Mexico by assuming the aggressive in the pacification of that troubled nation.

Another sore spot is the strained financial conditions in Paris, the financial center of France. Rumors have come across the waters that some of the big underwriting bankers are not only in a somewhat pessimistic attitude but that some of them had to be succeeded to prevent them from going under.

Domestic trade conditions are steadily improving. The railways, our principal arteries through which the commerce of the country moves, report over 11,000 fewer idle cars, that is, a more than 10 per cent increase in the number of cars in use.

One of the principal reforms to which his party platform committed President Wilson has turned out to be a popular success. I speak of the newly created reserve banking system.

Unscrambling the Rock Island holding company without recourse to a receivership, is going to prove a puzzle which the financial doctors are going to find hard to unravel.

The Basic Thought in Gathering These Fine SILKS For Our 1914 March Sale

was to procure the highest qualities possible at the very lowest market prices. So this sale is more than a mere distribution of silks at lowered prices—

It is an achievement in SILKS of the most fashionable weaves—and as extensive a showing as we've ever had at one time—even in a March Sale.

It is quite often possible to procure under market value various lots of silks all the year round—but to assemble a collection like this for a single sale even requires months and months of critical selection.
