PENROSE AND THE PRIMARY

SENATOR PENROSE'S formal declaration of his purpose to make another race for the Senate gave him a fine opportunity to discuss the popular primary and the flagrant violations of its letter and spirit by the leaders of the Democratic and Washington parties in this State. Most observant persons will agree with him that there has not been in the political history of Pennsylvania such a rampant and arbitrary exhibition of bossism as those of the two parties which have so vehemently denounced that sort of thing in the Republican organization. President Wilson selected the candidates of the dominant faction of the Democratic party and immediately issued orders from the White House that all other aspirants should get out of the way of the steam roller. But the Wilson hypnotism has about lost its effectiveness and the Democrats all over the State are coming out of their trance. Similar causes have produced similar results in the Washington party and thousands of well-meaning Republicans who supported Colonel Roosevelt are tired of the first-aid-to-the-Democracy policy of the leaders of the third party movement.

Fearful of the back-to-the-party trend among those who refused to support Mr. Taft, the Democratic organs of the Wilson faction are openly advising Washington party voters to register this year as Democrats. Having failed to accomplish fusion the bosses of the Democracy are now desperately trying to achieve their object in another way.

But the utter indifference of the anti-Republican forces to the primary law for which they clamored so loudly two years ago, as demonstrated in the slating of the tickets of the Democratic and Washington parties, has awakened the honest voter to the real situation and there is certain to be a tremendous drift toward the Republican lines. It was certain to come and even the bailing of Senator Penrose could not much longer have prevented the inevitable return of Republicans to their natural fighting ground. We shall not be greatly surprised to see in the next few weeks a rapid breaking up of the opposition to the Republican party. It does not follow, of course, that there is to be a return to old party methods and the arbitrary rule that is now causing the disruption of the Democracy, but the Republican party having taken a position on higher ground with the colors well advanced there is now no reason or justification for the honest voters of the party of protection and prosperity who were for a time constrained to fight under another flag to remain outside the breastworks.

Senator Penrose has submitted his candidacy squarely to the voters and on the proposition that the popular primary "has come to stay and should be cheerfully acquiesced in by every one as the final decision of a majority of the people." He invites a full discussion of his record covering a period of eighteen years in the United States Senate and upon that record is willing to leave his candidacy to the electors for their decision. No man could do more, and whatever the opposition to the Senator it will be conceded by all fair-minded persons that he has recognized the spirit of the primary law in thus submitting his public service for the consideration of the voters.

Two other Republicans have entered the arena and it will hardly be argued that Senator Penrose is the only choice; that he has in some occult way possessed the whole field. He has simply observed the spirit of the primary law and in compliance with its provisions asks the people to determine whether he shall longer serve the State in the most important legislative body in the world.

It will not do for the opponents of Senator Penrose to throw dust in the eyes of the people by declaring that his platform of protection to American industry and his insistence upon a real American policy with respect to international affairs, instead of the "watchful waiting" program of the Wilson administration, is out of joint with present-day ideals and the attitude of the country on these questions.

On the contrary the people who think for themselves—and the number is increasing by thousands daily—are beginning to understand that Senator Penrose and those who like him are standing firmly for the ideals of the founders of the Republic are the statesmen to whom the eyes of an awakened people will surely turn when the present era of hysteria and impractical theory shall have passed, and it is now passing.

Senator Penrose has violent and relentless opposition. No man who has been so long in public life is able to escape it, but under existing circumstances he should be judged upon his record as a member of the United States Senate. Has he represented this Commonwealth and its interests with devotion to the welfare of the people? Has he stood at all times for that which was best for his important constituency and the great interests and industries of an Imperial Commonwealth? These are the questions which every voter must determine for himself and Senator Penrose is entirely willing that his candidacy shall be considered on this basis. It matters little who shall lead a party, but it does matter that Pennsylvania shall be properly represented at Washington.

"Mexican money in sad muddle," says newspaper headline. Naturally, in Mexico.

JUDGE KUNKEL'S POPULARITY

THE first petition naming President Judge George Kunkel as candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court comes from Blair county. It is signed by many prominent citizens, irrespective of party, including the county sheriff, the mayor and city commissioners of Altoona. It is to be remembered that Judge Kunkel's candidacy was not formally announced until Saturday, and it was only two days later that his petition arrived here from a county in a distant part of the State. It is easy to understand the popularity of a candidate of Judge Kunkel's qualifications in his home district and the counties "roundabout," but spontaneous response from faraway districts can mean but one thing—that Judge Kunkel is as well and as favorably known over the State as he is in Dauphin county.

This is not due alone to his personal popularity, although he has the respect and admiration of every lawyer that has ever practiced before him, but to the splendid record he made for himself in the Capitol cases and the many important State suits that have been tried before him.

The United States Senate has voted that there shall be no more smoking on the floor of the chamber. But it is hardly to be expected that this will either clear the Senate atmosphere or prevent the usual number of "roasts."

ELECTRICIFYING THE PENNSY

DISPATCHES from Philadelphia announce that plans are afoot for the electrifying of the Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. While the project is vast in its extent and costly beyond the means of a corporation less wealthy than that operating the great Pennsylvania system, the truth of the report is well within the bounds of likelihood.

Years hence financiers doubtless will wonder why such astute managers as those at the head of the State's largest industry permitted the immense energy of the Juniata and Susquehanna rivers to go to waste, while at immense cost and frightful waste they operated their railway with coal-burning, steam-driven engines. Electricity is the motive power of the future and our rivers a never-failing source of supply.

Scientists have been giving us chills for years by predicting the early exhaustion of our coal deposits, but with the rivers harnessed and working not only will our coal be greatly conserved for uses to which electricity cannot be put, but its price will be maintained at a comparatively low level.

For ages the Susquehanna and the Juniata have been sweeping onward to the sea, spending wastefully a power that if properly controlled would drive the traffic of a great railroad from one end of the State to the other. What is more reasonable than that this vast energy should be turned to use?

No, Maude, the man who said "figures do not lie" did not refer to women.

WILSON AND THE PLATFORM

WHEN the suffragists asked President Wilson to recommend to Congress a "votes for women" amendment to the national Constitution, he replied that he is merely the spokesman of the Democratic party, and as such he declined to advocate anything not set forth in the Baltimore platform—implying that he is guided as President by the planks of that remarkable document.

Now we find him advocating the adoption of a law by Congress providing that American ships be required to pay tolls for the use of the Panama Canal—this in direct violation of a Democratic platform pledge.

Is it a mistake to assume that the President used the poor old platform merely as an excuse to dodge the suffrage question?

Eighty thousand rabbit skins have been shipped from the United States to Paris. They will come back as Persian lamb, Siberian lynx and those other animals we never hear about outside of a fur dealer's advertisements.

Our idea of a reckless man is one who buys his wife the new Spring fashion magazines.

CLUB FOR LABOR UNIONS

IT is reported that President Wilson would like to have Congress combine all of the Five-Brothers anti-trust bills in one measure. In whatever form he forces them through, the President will not be able to avoid the consequences of antagonizing the labor unions, the agricultural associations and the national and State granges if he permits one clause to stand unchanged.

It is this: "Any two or more persons in the United States who make any agreement, enter into any agreement, or arrive at any understanding by which they, directly or indirectly, undertake to prevent a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, or among any purchasers or consumers in the sale, production or transportation of any produce, article or commodity, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both."

This will unquestionably apply to labor unions and societies of the character of the Grange. Under the pretense of striking a blow at "big business" the administration is putting a club into the hands of employers that will enable them to send to jail every labor union member in the United States.

Perhaps the President may say that he will not permit the law to apply to either farmers or laborers. Very well, then, how is he going to enforce it on anybody?

EVENING CHAT

It is only when the list of things which John Y. Boyd did or helped to do in Harrisburg is published that people here realize the part he played in affairs of the State's capital. Mr. Boyd was in the forefront of religious movements for years and after his retirement from the coal business so long identified with the family he gave freely of his time to civic, charitable and public duties. There are now charities in the city which have not been aided by him and the two Christian associations were probably more directly benefited by his aid than that of any other resident of the city. In fact, the Young Men's Christian Association at Second and Locust streets was practically built by him. He was one of the organizers of the committee and literally "camped" on the operation after he had given of his time, means and influence to raise funds to make the construction possible. He followed the building from the foundation up and took considerable pride in its equipment, although by reason of health and age he did not take an active part in its management in recent years. When the Young Men's Christian Association building was projected Mr. Boyd took hold of the campaign for raising the funds and to use his own words "ran a race" with some other projects which he had helped work up. Another movement which he fostered and which he might have come along to assist to juveniles was the Big Brother Association. This was an organization of young men whose duty it became, because of commitment to the organization, to keep an eye on the youngsters who got into trouble. Literally it meant to play the part of an elder brother and for a time the work of probation officers was lessened because of the practical work was done. He was long one of the active managers of the Harrisburg Hospital and development of that institution which will come before many years, his plans being for a great institution for the whole district round about.

Few are aware that Mr. Boyd had been for some time thinking about the erection of a modern hotel for this city and had he lived it is possible that it might have come about. He was convinced that a first-class hotel, a sort of apartment hotel, could be made to pay in Harrisburg without a license and with moderate prices was something that the city needed as much as it needed a new hotel on an up-to-date scale. To friends he mentioned this project from time to time and once said that he had had a plan of the buildings now occupied by the temporary post office would afford an admirable site. This would have given a hotel at Third and Locust streets in a commanding place and had the project matured it would have been something of which the city could have been proud.

Mr. Boyd encouraged golfing in Harrisburg as much as any man. An expert player himself, he delighted in matches, and would enter the tournaments and would start to "get himself chased," as he used to say. Bonny nymets, the Boyd estate place just beyond Paxtang, has the only private links in this section, and Mr. Boyd frequently played on it up to a few years ago, once having the deciding match between the Country Club and Reservoir teams played on the nine-hole course. He supervised the laying out of the links at the Country Club of Harrisburg, the first club links hereabouts, and was chairman of a committee which was planning improvement of the Lackawanna course. He had given numerous cups for matches at the club and was looking forward to the opening of this season's playing.

No one in Harrisburg has brought as many noted religious workers to Harrisburg as Mr. Boyd. He said one time that the way to organize work was to study the field and then find out what was done in places where efforts had been successful. He went about the city, literally studying the opportunities for home mission work and secured the services of men who had gotten results. On one occasion Mr. Boyd disputed a statement regarding conditions in a certain part of the city with a friend, and after the conversation started out to get some firsthand information. He got more than he bargained for, but he furnished the funds to clean up the neighborhood. On several occasions Mr. Boyd secured the services of men who had won fame as evangelists in places where they were given severe trials, one of those who is well remembered being the "Lumber Jack."

Mr. Boyd said upon the occasion of the recent anniversary of Pine Street Sunday school that he was glad to announce that it had the largest enrollment of any school in the city. "But," he added to some Sunday school workers, "it's not the enrollment, but the number that we get every Sunday into the classes." He had plans under way to increase the average attendance when he died.

WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

—Ex-Secretary Knox is a grandfather again.
—Judge H. W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, is a sharp critic of the license laws as they stand.

—Adjutant General Stewart has been invited to attend the anniversary of the First Regiment in Philadelphia next month.

—John S. Gillespie, who has congressional ambitions in Pittsburgh, is an authority on good roads.

—Representative E. R. Benson is a candidate for postmaster in his home town at the close of the year.

—The Rev. J. Gray Bolton, of Philadelphia, says both press and pulpit need a little admonition occasionally.

M'CORMICK MAN HIT BY BOOMERANG

Tried to Have Philadelphia City Democratic Committee Endorse Harrisburger

COMMITTEE BOOMED RYAN

Penrose Will Be Boosted by Friends Who Have Formed Strong Union For Him

An attempt to have the Philadelphia Democratic city committee endorse Vance C. McCormick for the Democratic nomination for governor last night, ended in the committee voting 39 to 7 to endorse Michael J. Ryan.

The boomerang was the worst that has happened to the Jersey slate since the Democratic Club of Philadelphia, a reorganization stronghold, voted not to endorse anyone in advance of the primary election. The motion to endorse McCormick was tabled when sprung by a friend of the candidate and the committee showed its resentment by immediately going on record for Ryan.

The Philadelphia Ledger, Independent, has this to say about the meeting and its surprising windup: "A dramatic episode last night brought a routine, dry-as-dust meeting of the Democratic city committee to a close. A supporter of Vance McCormick, reorganizers' candidate for governor, attempted to force through an endorsement of him. It was like touching a torch to a powder barrel. When the smoke had cleared it was ascertained that the committee had endorsed City Solicitor Ryan's gubernatorial candidacy by a vote of 39 to 7. The action was so unexpected, so contrary to the procedure which had been decided upon, which was to keep hands off, otherwise the spirit of the primary law and let the voters make their choice, unswayed by action by any official party organization, that after it had been done both sides appeared dazed, the one by victory, the other by defeat. There was a scurrying for telephones and a quick spreading of the information among Democratic leaders. It was a regular meeting, and almost the entire night had been consumed in preparing for the May primary. There was no intention to endorse anyone, but toward the close of the meeting the committeemen were surprised to hear a motion offered to have the city committee endorse McCormick's candidacy."

Harrisburgers were much interested yesterday by the filing of the nomination for Frederick E. Geiser, member of the last House from Northampton county, who aspires to renomination on the Democratic ticket in his district. Geiser is well known here because of his activities against dual office holding, which caused him to be known as "Pure Pay Roll" Geiser. He is a Democratic lawyer in Easton and gave the Republican members of the House plenty of bother during the session. At the time he was in the city, it is likely that he will stand a good show in Democratic Northampton, and if he should come back to the House he will probably be heard from considerably on the Democratic side. In addition to Geiser it is probable that Representatives Trach and Benninger will be candidates again.

Acting promptly upon the announcement of Senator Penrose that he would be a candidate for re-election, a number of prominent identified with the manufacturing and business interests of the State, organized the Pennsylvania Protective Union yesterday. This new organization, it was stated, will help the campaign along vigorously. Headquarters for this body have been ready for some time, with furniture and full office equipped at Philadelphia, and all that was wanting for their opening was word from the Senator that he was ready to take his stand on the firing line.

At the meeting held yesterday afternoon James Dobson was elected president; Charlemagne Tower, Nathan T. Polwell, William M. Coates, John P. Fitch, Robert Dorman and J. H. Schwabke, vice-presidents, and Collector of the Port Chester W. Hill, secretary. The executive committee will include well-known men. The Senator will speak to-morrow in Philadelphia and visit the western counties later on.

POLITICAL SIDE LIGHTS

—The Philadelphia Democratic city committee is apparently a bad thing to monkey with unless you have the combination.

—The tail of the Jersey kite will be tied on at the meeting of the inside ring on Thursday.

—Chairman Dietrich seems to feel more comfortable to-day.

—Speaker Alter is in Philadelphia again to discuss matters with the Dimmick people.

—Arrangements are being made for a big Ryan dinner at one dollar per plate, the scene to be in Philadelphia.

—The northern tier is to be invaded next week and they're hoping on the Square that the retreat will not be as disastrous as that from Pittsburgh.

—Judge Garman is now playing the sphinx.

—Colonel L. A. Watres is being boomed for Governor at Scranton.

—A delegation of Lackawanna men yesterday told Senator Penrose that Dimmick would not carry his own county.

—Probably some more men will be "suggested" for the Democratic ticket next Thursday.

—J. R. Freed has been re-elected chairman of the Bucks county committee.

—The Republican rules committee will meet here later in the month.

—William Flinn is on his way home from Florida.

—Ryan is going to Pittsburgh next week and Lewis may also be there.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Don't Expect Too Much, Men (From the Washington Star.)

Some Democrats seem to think that W. J. Bryan should be seen forever in his shirt sleeves working as hard as he did at the Baltimore convention.

Quite Likely This Explains It (From the New York Evening Post.)

The usurpation of the power of Congress by Mr. Wilson is possibly the result of the usurpation of the powers of President by Messrs. Aldrich, Cannon and Payne.

GENTLE SPRING

By Wing Dinger
Someone saw a blue bird.
So the papers say.
"Noter saw a shadfly
Just the other day.

In my cozy office,
Heated well with steam,
I sit fondly thinking
That 'tis not a dream.

Sun is shining brightly,
Through the window pane;
I am glad 'cause gentle
Spring is here again.

Then my dream is shattered;
"Phone rings—bless my soul,
'Tis my wife, she's saying,
"Better order coal."

"You never seem to get any letters from your sweetheart."
"Oh, nothing commonplace as that.
We exchange graphophone records."

"You say your boy went to New York to be a speculator?" said the neighbor.
"Yes," replied the proud mother.
"He may go broke."
"No; he isn't that kind of a speculator. He's a ticket speculator." — Washington Star.
