H. Shopp in opposition. This is a unique case involving construction of a portion of the act of 1854 relative codicil.s Catharine E. Lightner made the Home for the Friendless residu-ary legatee and the bequest was at-tacked on behalf of heirs. During the afternoon the court heard the appeal from the decision of Washington township, which was pre-sented by John R. Geyer. The elec-tion was held September 10, 1912, and the division was authorized 108 to 91, but objection was made to the details of the proceeding. The ques-tion is whether the acts of 1903 and 1905 should be construed together, as held by the Dauphin court, or whether the act of 1905 controls. The appeal was taken by I. H. Schreffler and no one appeared in opposition. The West-Hanna case was also ar-gued.

Surface has directed that an in-vestigation be made into the ravages declared to have been made among wheat in Berks county. He will make some personal observations and rec-ommend a way to overcome it. Want Inquiry.—The Oak Lane Park Improvement Association of Philadel-phia has sent to the Public Service Commission a copy of resolutions re-garding the Green Lane crossing, lo-cated at the junction of Green Lane and the Philadelphia & Reading rail-way. It is claimed that the crossing is both dangerous and objectionable, and the Commission is asked to inves-tigate it.

WHO WROTE THIS LETTER? MR. JOSEPH JEFFERSON ORPHEUM THEATER HARRISBURG, PA.

Dear Mr. Jefferson—Just a line to tell you that your little sketch at the Orpheum this week has done more to show me how much my drinking really interferes with my wife's happiness than all other lessons I ever had, and from now on I am on the wagon. Thanks to you. A "GOOD FELLOW." That's the letter Mr. Jefferson received, and now he wants to meet the writer. "If my work on the stage has straightened out the kinks in just one family, I haven't acted in vain, have 1?" asked Mr. Jefferson.

One of the most convenient and desirable methods of making provision for your family after your death is the Trust Fund.

Amounts, large or small, may be placed in trust, as convenient, and will not be jeopardized by any unfortunate conditions that may arise in your business life.

The Trust Department of this institution will be glad to point out the many advantages of such a fund when so requested.
