

Women and Their Interests

By BAETRICE FAIRFAX

Are you one of the great freak family? It is a family composed of girls who, from all outward evidence, are parentless, and the mark of kinship is a feather extremely long, put on at an angle extremely dan-erous; a hat that is extremely hideous; a dress extremely baggy in the waist, extremely low in the neck, extremely tight in the skirt and extremely split at one side.

Indeed, all their apparel is so extreme that some call themselves the Extremists and forget that to be an Extremist is to be a Freak, the two words meaning the same.

When one of the Freak family passes men turn to stare, and so extremely curdled is the brain under the extreme hat that the member mistakes the staring for admiration and glories in it, neither heeding nor dreaming of the remarks far from complimentary that are made after she has passed.

Like a Circus

"It's like going to a circus," I heard a young man say recently, watching a crowd of girls go by, not one of whom was dressed with sense or sanity, "and it will be the side show thrown in when they appear with purple and pink wigs."

His companion sighed and made no reply. The week before he had written to a newspaper, asking the way to meet some nice, sensible girl.

"My habits are good. I earn $30 a week, and I want to make the acquaintance of some nice girl with the object of matrimony. I will work hard for the right sort of a girl, the sort of a girl a man can take his earnings to every Saturday night knowing that she can be trusted to keep a nice home for him, buy sensible clothes for herself, and lay by for the future. I want a good, sweet, lovable working partner."

"There isn't such a thing," he exclaimed to himself, and instantly recalled it when he caught glimpses among the overly-painted and profusely powdered faces that went by of a face here and a wee there that retained traces of original loveliness.

"Gee," he said to himself, "if I could only influence a lot of these girls to be less freakish in their looks I know dozens of nice young men who would ask to marry them. They think they are birds! So they are, parrots and peacocks, and what we men are longing for is a return of the nice, modest wren."

A Familiar Cry

It is a cry heard often these days, and comes from the big, hungry hearts of men; men who are sensible and sane, and want sane and sensible girls for wives. The carpenter who wants a wife to help him become a big contractor; the brakeman who wants a working mate on the path he hopes to travel to become an official of his road; Every man who works with his head and hands and plans for bigger, better things, is crying for a sweet, sensible girl who will be content with him and his day of small beginnings, knowing that together they will reach a day of greater achievement.

And do you wonder that in the Freak family he has small hopes of finding her?

C., March 13.—Eleven battleships of the Atlantic fleet will start their annual spring target practice with heavy guns off the entrance to Chesapeake Bay during the week beginning March 22, it was announced. program of firing usually adopted for the Atlantic fleet at this season.

Two People in One Family Made Happy—Investigate if You Doubt

Mr. Baer lives at Highspire. He was a painter by trade, but presuming that his horrible stomach troubles were caused by such work, as is frequently the case, he discontinued working at the trade. His stomach caused him indescribable pains and misery. Cramping, bloating and belching, caused, some doctors said, by indigestion, others by catarrh, made his life miserable indeed. None of the prescribed medicines helped him. His breath was simply awful, his tongue coated and his general condition alarming. He called at the drug store and procured some Quaker Extract. Relief followed quickly, and continued in a surprising manner that he voluntarily called and expressed his thanks and allowed the publication of this testimonial. His daughter, aged 6 years, had also been complaining, so he gave her the extract also, and child expelled a large number of stomach worms from 2 1/2 to 3 inches long. These two people in one family were cured by Quaker. Persons doubting may investigate in any manner they please.

Once more you are advised, if you suffer from rheumatism, catarrh, kidney, liver, stomach or blood troubles, to call at the drug store. Hear what he has to say about his really wonderful Quaker remedies. Try them and get results like hundreds of other Harrisburg people have obtained. Quaker Herb Extract, $1.00 a bottle, 2 for $2.50. Oil of Balm, 25 cents. From W. H. Kennedy, 30 South Third street.—Advertisement.

TRIBUTES ARE PAID TO JOHN V. BOYD

Princeton Alumni Acts; Shimmell and Boyd Praised by Historical Society

Action was taken by the Central Pennsylvania Princeton Alumni Association on the death of John V. Boyd, president of the association, at a meeting held yesterday at the residence of Charles H. Bergner, the vice-president.

A committee, consisting of John Fox Weiss and Roy G. Cox, was appointed to draw up a minute expressing the deep sense of loss felt by the association.

The minute is as follows: "John Yeomans Boyd, of the class of 1884, died Monday, March 9, 1914. The executive committee of the Central Pennsylvania Alumni Association of Princeton University, in special meeting, hereby expresses its deep sense of loss in the death of Mr. Boyd. He was one of the organizers of this association and had been continuously an earnest, loyal and active member thereof. He has served the association in all capacities and at the time of his death was its president, having filled that office for several years. He personified the true Princeton spirit and manifested deep and intelligent interest in all the concerns of the university. Believing it to be the duty of every alumnus to further interest of his Alma Mater, he was unceasing in his activities for Princeton and demonstrated this interest especially in his relations with and his work in the Central Pennsylvania Alumni Association. In his death Princeton and our association have suffered a real loss."

At a meeting of the Historical Society of Dauphin County last night resolutions on the lives of Mr. Boyd and Dr. L. S. Shimmell, two members who died during the last week, were given and committees were appointed to draw up memorials expressing the feeling of the members of the society. Dr. Hugh Hamilton spoke on the paintings in the rotunda of the Capitol at the historical society meeting.

Only Tree-ripened Florida Oranges and Grapefruit —Juicy, Sweet and Spicy—are Sold Under this Mark

Only nature can ripen oranges and grapefruit successfully—man's efforts to imitate her processes always have failed.

Nature's way is to ripen the fruit on the tree—she holds the oranges and grapefruit there until they have become sweet and full of juice.

Oranges and Grapefruit That Are So Good Your Mouth Will Water When You See Them

The Florida Citrus Exchange, a co-operative, non-profit making association of growers, markets only tree-ripened fruit. Its members are pledged to leave their oranges and grapefruit growing on the trees until nature has converted the citric acid into sugar and has made the fruit healthful and delicious. Only then is an orange or grapefruit really fit to be eaten.

Florida soil and climate produce oranges and grapefruit of surpassing quality. The Florida Citrus Exchange members join in growing, picking, packing and shipping these fruits in the most modern and sanitary ways. Your guarantee of tree-ripened, sweet, juicy well-flavored citrus fruits is the mark—in red on boxes and wrappers—of the Florida Citrus Exchange. Look for it.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF PHONE LINES DISCUSSED BY EXPERT

By L. H. KINNARD

(This is the first of a series of articles written by L. H. Kinnard, well known in Harrisburg, on public ownership of telephones and telegraphs.)

It is strongly argued by present advocates of Government ownership that the use of the service would be still more widely extended were the telephone systems of this country turned over to the Post Office Department, but while the casual hearer might assume that such an argument is substantiated by the results obtained in other countries which have experimented with public ownership of telephone lines, even the most ardent supporter of the public ownership of the subject will soon find that such is not the case.

In practically every country except the United States the national telephone system is now owned and operated by the government. And if we investigate as to the telephone development in foreign lands, it appears that the average one telephone to every 143 inhabitants; whereas the United States, on the same date, averaged one telephone to every twelve inhabitants.

Country	Telephones per 100 population
Austria	0.6
Belgium	0.6
Denmark	0.6
Germany	1.4
Great Britain	1.4
Italy	0.2
The Netherlands	0.1
Switzerland	0.1
Spain	0.1
Sweden	2.4
Switzerland	1.4
United States	8.1

What do these percentages which are also computed as of January, 1911, show? Certainly the comparisons do not indicate that private enterprise is less successful than Government ownership in extending the broad use of the telephone. For even with our relatively sparse and scattered population, the United States has set a standard of development which none of the Governments of Europe has even approached; and that the service is of vastly superior quality in this country, even the most ardent exponent of Government ownership will not dispute.

Telephone Development

Considering the telephone development of the large cities—it is an es-established fact that only one European city, Stockholm, is able to boast of the number of telephones per hundred population that Philadelphia is, whereas Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Chicago and Pittsburgh all show a vastly more extensive use of telephone service—determined on the same percentage basis—than any of the great metropolitan centers of Europe.

Nationally and locally the great era of expansion has hardly begun. The wonderful growth of the Bell system, which has jumped from 200,000 telephones in 1890 to over 8,000,000 today, has not even yet progressed half way towards the goal upon which every Bell executive and engineer is now focusing his thought and effort.

Nor will the balance of the way be all easy traveling. The course has been surveyed and staked out by these telephone specialists, with every confidence that the continued support of the public—both in its patronage of the service and in the supplying of additional capital for extensions—will endure just so long as an efficient and comprehensive service is maintained at rates that are reasonable. Continued progress is thus guaranteed to the American people under the existing order of things.

Great Work Endangered

The advocates of Government ownership, nevertheless, would turn over this gigantic task to the Post Office Department—would take from trained hands the advancement of this most exacting public service, in the expectancy not only that it would be maintained at its present standard of quality and availability, but that even faster progress could be made.

That this is within the realm of probability there would seem to be grave doubt. The people of this country have before them, however, the experience of the past in every county where Government ownership of the telephone systems has been attempted. The testimony of this experience cannot be weighed too carefully in reaching the decision which the people alone can make.
