CUT PAPER TOWELS:

Each Clerk Will Be Allowed Week's Supply For Individual Use

In line with retrenchment policy, the Pennsylvania railroad has issued orders cutting out the paper roller towels. That they are sanitary is not denied but the new style of towel has proven rather expensive.

It may take sometime before the paper towels entirely disappear as there is a large stock on hand, but in many of the local offices the line towel has again made its appearance and the roller towels have been discarded. On some of the trains the paper towels will continue until the supply is exhausted.

The Pennsylvania officials have figured out that it is much cheaper to provide individual towels for their clerks and in each department cupboards are now being provided for individual towels. Arrangements will be made to have these towels laundered at the company laundries in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Bach employe will probably be allowed an average of four clean towels.
