HISTORY OF CHURCH OF GOD COMPLETED

Rev. Dr. Forncrook Has Compiled Exhaustive Account of Winebrenner's Followers

The History of the Church of God by C. H. Forney, D. D., LL. D., 1366 Derry street, formerly editor of the official weekly of the churches is off the press and will be issued in April. The work is the result of four years of effort, and is an exhaustive history of the early ministry of its founder, John Winebrenner, of the split from the German Reformed Church which resulted in his starting the Church of God, early records of the church, and a comprehensive history of the various elderships now existing throughout the United States. The volume is issued from the Central Publishing Company house and was bound at the Evangelical publishing house.

Dr. Forney, paraphrasing Emerson's dictum that "all history resolves itself into the biographies of a few stout souls," asserts that the biographies of a dozen ministers, thoroughly written, would be the history of the Churches of God. The author then proceeded to write that history but presenting a highly interesting account of the events that led up to formation of the church, from the time that the Reformed church was closed against Mr. Brown that Winebrenner had appointed to preach on the grounds that he was not a member, to the locking of the church at Shiremanstown against Winebrenner, who, standing on the steps declared: "The people can lock houses but they cannot lock the door of Heaven."

Not long after the Mulberry street Union Bethel, the first church, was erected, and was followed by the building of the Fourth Street Bethel in 1854.

A history of mission work, an exhaustive hymnology and bibliography complete the volume, which is a history and reference volume in one. It is illustrated with more than a hundred cuts of clergymen and churches.
