COPELIN CRITICISED FOR TAKING VACATION

Ordinance Caused Flurry
The clerkship ordinance that caused the flurry provides for the abolishing of the chief clerk and assistant chief clerkships so far as the city's payroll is concerned. Harrisburg now pays $2,200 for the two jobs. If the clerkship help be necessary to Mr. Copelin, then Bowman contends Copelin himself should pay for it.

To support his charge that the city treasurer was the best paid man in the city's service and could well afford to pay the $2,200 from his own pocket, Mr. Bowman submitted a list showing the treasurer's income during the last year. It totaled more than $14,000.

The Mayor said he didn't believe Council should act finally on the measure before Mr. Copelin's side would be heard and this of course is impossible until the treasurer's return.

How Mr. Copelin Serves City

"Would you think it right for you or I, whom the citizens of Harrisburg elected, and of whom the citizens have a right to expect continuous service in its employ," asked Mr. Bowman, "to go away and stay away from the job for two months?"

"Was it two months? I wasn't sure but I didn't think it was so long as that."

"Yes," tartly returned Mr. Bowman, "and you know it. You wouldn't think such a thing and I don't believe the people of Harrisburg will either. Mr. Copelin's been expected since early in March. For two weeks I have delayed final action on this measure at the request of the clerk. But Mr. Copelin doesn't put in an appearance."

"Well, I don't know positively but I was told that Mr. Copelin was expected home Sunday, but now I understand he can't reach here by April 1. I can't say that the def."

"April 1," cut in Mr. Taylor. "Why the budget must be passed, so it may be effective by the first Monday of April. To wait will make it too late."

"Well, while I won't say that I'm for giving the city treasurer this money," said the Mayor, "I must say that I believe in giving him a chance to speak."

"Now, Mr. Mayor," smilingly answered Mr. Bowman, "is it not a fact that you'd like to see Copelin get the money?"

Drags in School Board

Then Mr. Gorgas suggested the school board end of the controversy, by asking whether or not the school board itself fixed the compensation for the collection of taxes, or whether the rate was fixed by a statute. His purpose obviously was to raise the question of whether reduction in the rate for collecting school taxes would materially lessen the income of the city treasurer and whether the treasurer's income would be further decreased should he be required to pay his clerks from his own pocket.

"How do we know," inquired Mr. Gorgas, "the school collection rate will be what you say it is? You recall that the school board is said to be under the control of a certain gentleman who is much under fire. Now that the collection of taxes has been taken away from him, is it not possible that the school board might reduce the compensation which they have been giving him as tax collector? I should have liked to have heard

Mr. Copelin's views on this subject before final action was taken."

"Does any one know," asked Mr. Bowman, "whether or not that the school board means to make a reduction?"

Royal Cautiously "Buts"
"I can't say, but—" Mayor Royal very cautiously answered, "but I've been told that the board does mean to reduce the compensation."

Both Commissioners Lynch and Taylor said that while they were happy to hear Mr. Copelin's side of the controversy, they did not think it advisable to wait longer if action was to be taken on the budget. And the $14,000 which has been paid out by the city is entirely too big an item not to be considered, they said.

The budget carrying an appropriation of $510,872.47 was passed finally by a four to one vote, Mayor Royal alone voting in the negative. One of the objections he filed was with reference to the appropriation of some $30,000 to safeguard the city financially against probable claims for paying damages for nonassessable property by Front street property owners.

Commissioner Gorgas took the liberal view, however. "I didn't see why," said he, "I should simply record a negative vote against the entire ordinance because I objected to some of its items."

Council voted unanimously for the passage of the income tax ordinance. The ordinance contains no provision for salary and this will have to be taken care of from the revenues. Council shortly after the beginning of the session, Mr. Bowman raised the question of the food inspection ordinance in order that there may be no duplications.

When Commissioner W. L. Gorgas referred the appeal of John Wagner, Hancock and Christian streets, to reopen the assessment on his property. His place was burned down a week ago. Upon the suggestion of Commissioner Lynch, Council decided to serve as a committee to confer with the Pennsylvania railroad officials relative to the construction of a subway at Division street. Commissioner Lynch said Mr. Copelin should take the step in accordance with the request of the West End Improvement League, the Riverside Improvement League, and the Division street Improvement League.

When Commissioner W. L. Gorgas petitioned Council to start the Division street subway ball-rolling, Council will meet on the call of the chairman. When Commissioner W. L. Gorgas was asked after yesterday afternoon's council meeting for further details relative to his statement about the possible change in the rate of compensation for the collection of school taxes, he intimated that he had heard stories of an "agreement" a year or so ago. When pressed for an explanation in more detail Mr. Gorgas smilingly declined to go into the subject further.

Black Hand Workers Fail to Carry Out Threat

Black hand workers at Middletown luckily for themselves did not try to carry out threats last night which they had made against the life of Frank L. Barbusci of that town.

Barbusci is a laborer and by dint of hard work and harder saving he has stored up quite a tidy sum of money. Four days ago he received a dirty piece of paper in the mails on which was scrawled a demand for $400. The demand directed that the money be placed in an old log at the rear of the Atlantic Refining Company's oil tank near the old Middletown planing mill. Barbusci at once notified Herbert E. Lucas, postal inspector, and he with two other officers last evening went to Middletown to wait for the blackhanders. They did not turn up, Inspector Lucas said this morning.

Palmer "Follows Blindly"
When Congressman Palmer, of Pennsylvania, rose to reply to the question on behalf of the administration, he, too, addressed the Democrats exclusively, declaring that the Republicans are the common enemy and that the Democrats must settle this question among themselves.

Mr. Palmer's speech was an elaboration of the remarkable statement he issued the other night, declaring that the House should follow the President blindly, because it does not know why the President has asked for the repeal of the exemption law.

Wilson Has "Own Reasons"
Mr. Palmer repeated that the President has his own reasons for demanding this repeal, reasons which he cannot communicate either to the public or to the legislative branch of the government.

So far as he could, without becoming actually sensational, Palmer gave the House to understand that unless there is a repeal of the tolls exemption law, there will be war between the United States and some foreign power. He did not appear to know what power, but he was apparently very certain that the President would not have said that the repeal must be accomplished unless he had some very grave reasons for such an assertion.

Bryan Service, Too
Secretary Bryan indicated that he was not only for the bill to repeal the exemption of American coastwise vessels from payment of Panama Canal tolls, but also in favor of the special rule by which debate of the repeal bill has been limited.

Mr. Bryan declined, however, to discuss his reasons for changing the position he took at the Baltimore convention as chairman of the committee which shaped the platform in favor of tolls exemption.

Murdered Teachers' Body Is Discovered in Bushes

Little Falls, N. Y., March 28.—The body of Miss Lydia Beecher, a high school teacher of Poland, N. Y., was found in a clump of bushes on the outskirts of that town to-day. She had been murdered with a knife, apparently after having been attacked. The young woman left her boarding house last night to mail a letter at the village post office. When she did not return, her father, Mr. Henry Fitch, a farmer, driving along the road, sighted the body. Miss Beecher was 21 years old. The authorities took the man in custody to-day as a suspect.

ONE TERM DOGS DOOMS FOR WILSON

The fear is expressed that with the President triumphant the complete harmony that obtained up to yesterday is not likely to return in the life of the Wilson administration. In fact, the Republicans are chuckling over the remark: "Well, the Democrats are up to their old tricks of spilling the beans. It was bound to come sooner or later and it has."

Right in this connection Democratic critics of the President are beginning to ask about the attitude of Mr. Wilson toward the one term plank in the Baltimore platform.

They point out that Mr. Wilson recommended the repeal bill in spite of the specific endorsement of "free tolls" by the platform. While he ran as a candidate, and they want to know if he intends similarly to ignore the one term declaration of the Baltimore deliverance.

The Clark adherents express great interest in this proposition. Whatever may be the mental attitude of the Speaker toward the President, Mr. Clark's followers are hostile to Mr. Wilson and insist that the Speaker will enter the lists for the presidential nomination in 1916. Apparently they are not dismayed by threats of representatives of the administration that Mr. Clark should make his plans for Speaker of the next House before he thinks of the party convention of 1916.

The House Leadership
All this hostile talk is in striking contrast to conditions that have prevailed heretofore in the Democratic organization. There is another angle to the present state of affairs, and that is the fact that the Speaker will retire from the House at the end of this Congress.

Representative Kitchin, of North Carolina, was supposed to be selected for the succession, but Mr. Kitchin is also opposed to the President on the tolls question, and accordingly the administration spokesmen are grooming another for the leadership in the next House.

Leader Underwood yesterday declared, among other things, that the sovereignty of the United States over the Canal Zone is at issue in the pending legislation; that the passage of the measure means the surrender by the United States of the right to assert control over its own property.

Mr. Underwood's Queries
"Are we now to yield the sovereign rights of the nation, and for what?" asked Mr. Underwood. "Can any one tell us plainly why we surrender, and what is to be accomplished by it? Are we to yield merely because the sentiment of Europe is against us? When engaged in the sentiment of Europe ever been with us about matters of moment?"

"Was Europe with us when we protested against the British government taking up the Panama Canal? Was it in the Parliament? Did Europe protest against the unlawful seizures and search of vessels in the second decade of the last century? When we have been so successful in our efforts to maintain and preserve our rights, political and commercial, with the acquiescent sympathy of European governments?"

These concluding remarks of Mr. Underwood's speech, which directly challenged President Wilson's plea for repeal on the ground of our foreign relations, were greeted with loud applause by the House and galleries.

Referring to the plank in the Democratic platform which declared for the "exemption from tolls of American ships engaged in the coastwise trade," Mr. Underwood said:

"There can be no contention as to the meaning of this language. No one can raise the issue that the bill now pending for collection of school taxes, he intimated that he had heard stories of an 'agreement' a year or so ago. When pressed for an explanation in more detail Mr. Gorgas smilingly declined to go into the subject further."

The Party Pledge
"Personally, I believe that the party pledge should be lived up to in good faith by those who claim allegiance to party principles, but as there are many who differ from me in reference to the binding effect of a party platform, I will not at this time endeavor to discuss the pending bill from that standpoint."

Un-American Spirit of Surrender
"Our whole difficulty in this matter," he said, "is the un-American spirit of surrender. From the union of our own people have exhibited toward this important question from the very beginning."

Speaker Clark, taking the same view, said: "I do not question your honesty, but you are making a serious mistake if you adopt this rule, and I would not be worthy of the commission if you have placed me in this position. If I did not have the courage to stand here and tell you so."

Palmer "Follows Blindly"
When Congressman Palmer, of Pennsylvania, rose to reply to the question on behalf of the administration, he, too, addressed the Democrats exclusively, declaring that the Republicans are the common enemy and that the Democrats must settle this question among themselves.

Mr. Palmer's speech was an elaboration of the remarkable statement he issued the other night, declaring that the House should follow the President blindly, because it does not know why the President has asked for the repeal of the exemption law.

STOCK MARKET SUBJECT TO VARIOUS INFLUENCES

Decided Slump in Railroad Earnings Emphasized by February Statements; Business Backward

New York, March 28.—The stock market was subjected to various depressing influences this week, and speculative sentiment became more pessimistic. The decided slump in railroad earnings, emphasized by February statements, drew further attention to the less favorable position of the carriers. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis cut its dividends and Norfolk Southern stopped payments on the common stock. Extension of the economic order by various railroads, Pennsylvania alone reporting it had laid off 15,000 men this year.

General business conditions were still backward. Reports from the steel trade in particular, were pessimistic, and extensive contraction of operations was expected, failing a considerable revival in new business in the next few weeks.

In spite of these bearish influences, amounts in stocks were small. The market was somewhat quiet, and trading was light and the general level of quotations was altered only slightly by the week's operations. The comparative steadiness of the market was due in large part to the sustaining force of a large short interest.
