FIRST USE OF RESINOL STOPS TERRIBLE ITCH

When Other Treatments Gave No Relief. Suffered 8 Years. But Resinol Cured in a Week

Jan. 27, 1914: "I suffered over eight years with eczema. It started in one little place and spread until it covered my hands. My hands were like they had been burned by fire and peeled off in large pieces until they were only raw flesh. It was told to me that it might be cured by the use of Resinol. It itched and burned and I tried that I could not sleep at night. I tried all sorts of eczema salves and one prescription after another, but nothing gave me any relief until I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and after the first application my hands never itched or burned again, and were well in one week. I tried every sufferer from eczema to know that there is a cure in Resinol." (Signed) Miss Ethel Scott, Milledale, Ga.

Physicians have prescribed Resinol for nineteen years for all sorts of skin troubles, pimples, dandruff, sores, ulcers, burns, wounds and piles. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. It is a trial size, free, Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, write to Dept. 2, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Stomach Troubles Due to Acidity

SO CALLED EMINENT SPECIALIST.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, stomach-ache and inability to retain food, are the result of acidity. Fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach causing the formation of acids. Wind distends the stomach, and causes the formation of gas, sometimes known as heartburn. While the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, meaning food. Such fermentation is unnatural, and should be stopped. It is only unnatural, but may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisulphate of magnesia, probably the most effective corrector of acidity known, should be taken in a glass of water or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever fermentation is felt. This stops the wind and acid, and prevents the formation of gas. Stop or prevent the formation of gas by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisulphate of magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and enable the stomach to do its work properly without the production of poisonous gas and dangerous acids. The French Method to Darken Gray Hair

Society Women Delighted

The French people pay close attention to the hair; they know that Quinine is a wonderful stimulant to the hair roots and that Sage, when properly steeped, prevents graying and restores hair to its natural color.

So they mix both, and the result is a splendid and harmless tonic that speedsily restores gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, and almost instantly drives away dandruff and scalp itch.

This same preparation, in a more scientific form, is now being introduced into America under the name of LeMay's Cream of Sage and Quinine, and can be procured by anyone interested for about 50 cents a bottle. Ask for it by name.

Druggists report that on account of this famous old French recipe darkening the hair so evenly and naturally, and being so absolutely free from any dye that there is a brisk demand for it.—Advertisement.

REBELS DEAD

from house to house, drew the circle closer about the enemy.

Fight for Favored Roof

A hundred small encounters occurred intermittently in the streets or over the possession of some favorable roof, but the roar of cannon was almost continuous.

Both sides used armored trains. These, with big guns mounted, suddenly appear around an elbow of one of the hills, discharge a broadside and then retire. Early in the attack on Gomez Palacio the trains ventured out at the same time and a lively exchange of shots ensued, like a naval engagement on land.

The federals made use of huge rockets, which were shot to a great height, exploding in the air and letting down a hail of buckshot.

On the fourth day of the fight the intense suffering from heat and thirst was relieved by a rain thought to have been brought on by the heavy firing. During the battle scouts brought word that federal reinforcements from Monterrey were approaching on the east. General Herrera was sent against them and he had sent them scurrying into the hills.

The battle surged first into Torreon, then back to the railroad yards and ravines in the suburbs for two or three days. The federals' grew weaker each day in their fighting. Finally the federals evacuated to the south and the rebels took possession of Torreon.

Great supplies of food, ammunition and artillery and stores of cotton fell into the rebels' hands by the capture.

American Ragtime Tinkles From Piano Amid Scenes of Rejoicing in Juarez

By Associated Press

Juarez, Mex., April 3.—With the taking of Torreon by the rebels last night constitutionalists now control an immense wedge-shaped portion of Mexico, with the point resting on Torreon, 500 miles south of here, and the top extending along the American border from Nogales, Ariz., to a point just west of El Paso, Texas. At Piedras Negras, known also as Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, there is a federal garrison, but does not now constitute a menace to the rebels.

The States now subject to the rebel arms are Chihuahua, Sonora (except the port of Guaymas), most of Coahuila, Durango, Sinaloa and Tamaulipas.

Yesterday victory was said to make the capture of Saltillo and Monclovia in Coahuila, and Monterey, the key to the State of Nuevo Leon, assured. The main federal stronghold according to Villa's report to General Carranza, was wiped out by death, wounds, capture or flight at Gomez Palacio and Torreon. Mazatlan, the federal port in the State of Sinaloa, by the rebels of the veteran rebel army at Torreon, also is in a precarious state.

Assures Rebel Control

Thus, by his successful campaign of the last month, General Francisco Villa has practically assured rebel control of the vast territory of the north and central Mexico, and has for himself the reputation of being the foremost soldier of the country.

It was but a little over a year ago that he started out from a village near here with two companions, six horses, seven dollars in money and a meager supply of beans, coffee and sugar. The horses at the time were not for sale and Villa's first step upon capturing this city three months ago was to repay the liveryman from whom the horses were "borrowed."

Interest here to-day was divided in speculation about the future of the country and the effect, if any, that the rebel triumph would have in Washington.

Men Embrace Each Other

Never in all its dramatic history since the Madero revolution of 1910 has Juarez been so nearly mad with joy. It is as though a great messenger from military headquarters ran through the streets shrieking that Torreon had fallen. Drunk with elation, men embraced each other wherever they went. In the streets, old mission of Guadalupe were set ringing louder and faster than ever they have rung for religious purposes. Chalked and rebel soldiers woke from their sleep in the towers of the city. Backs to cheer. Then, stirred by a common impulse, their rifles were turned loose into the air.

Soon after, inhabitants of El Paso supposed Juarez was again suffering one of its periodical attacks.

Finely dressed officials, high in the Carranza administration, threw their arms around unwashed private soldiers in the streets and yelled with delight. The municipal band, hastily routed from their beds, paraded through the streets playing the national anthem. In the gambling hall conducted by Villa's agents for the benefit of the rebel treasury all played cards. In the streets, keepers and spectators alike, shouted their joy.

"Viva Villa!"

Through it all, only one name was heard above all others. It was Villa "viva Villa!" Common soldiers mingled freely with the highest officials of the rebel government in a great resort and were invited to drink to the glory of the insurgent arms. Virtually the only place open in the Mexican border town where drinks might be bought, the cabaret was crowded by the dozens with civil and military men of all ranks. In all stages of dress, for the hour was late, they crowded in to embrace friends and toast the conquering general. In the midst of all the rejoicing, American ragtime music tinkled from an antiquated piano in the corner, while American women in El Paso danced to the one-step with Mexican partners in the middle of the big room.

Rush For Bridges

When the shooting of rifles and pistols in celebration began, dozens of federal sympathizers in El Paso awoke and made a rush for the international bridges, thinking that by some unexpected stroke of fortune, federal forces were attacking Juarez. But they turned back crestfallen when informed by American soldiers on duty at the bridges that the fall of Torreon was the cause. Rebel soldiers guarding the Mexican end of the structures saw the proceedings and howled tauntingly at the "Federalists" who had "come to see the federalists retake Juarez."

By 2 o'clock in the morning the excitement had died away and the streets were deserted. Plans were under way for a formal celebration this afternoon, over which General Carranza would preside.

Sanuel Belden of San Antonio, Tex., a friend of General Carranza, described the scene in the Carranza home when the long awaited news of victory was received.

"General Carranza had been talking with Gomez Palacio off and on for some time," Mr. Belden said, "and was chatting with members of his family. He seemed very cheerful and buoyant. At 11 o'clock the telegraph operator came in with the news that a piece of paper in his hand.

"Well, Muchacho, is it Torreon?" the general smiled as one who knew well what the answer would be.

"Yes, my dear," was the reply.

"Carranza kissed his wife and daughters, then—have the bugler sound the call of triumph," he ordered, and gave me the telephone, I must tell Mrs. Villa.

"His was the first news of her husband's achievements to reach Mrs. Villa.

"Carranza's next act was to telegraph a message of hearty congratulations to Villa. Meanwhile friends of Mrs. Villa were calling her on the telephone with words of congratulation. Villa, despite the fact that he called in person and wine reserved for the occasion was gratefully drunk to the victorious general, to his loyal lieutenants and those who gave their lives."

The victory gave the rebels undisputed control of the central part of Northern Mexico; six hundred miles south from the Rio Grande.

Its full effect cannot be summarized in a moment, but in prestige and power, it is said, its value is incalculable.

Much Interest Attached to Return of Wilson's Representative to U. S.

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., April 3.—Announcement of the prospective departure for the United States of John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico, revived interest to-day in the future trend of the Washington government's policy toward the southern republic.

For the last few weeks officials have pointed to the battle of Torreon as likely to furnish an index of the future, but the result was as its effect on the military or diplomatic situation as respects the strength of the two factions is still a matter of some uncertainty here.

While the President has said Mr. Lind would return to Vera Cruz after he had obtained a rest and vacation in the United States, many observers think he even will go back as there has been a disposition for many weeks on the part of the Washington government to refrain from diplomatic activity while the military forces of the Constitutionalists and the federalists struggled for supremacy. The prospect of even more vigorous warfare and the unwillingness of either faction to accept any personal responsibility for compromise or mediation has caused the American government to assume an attitude of strict neutrality. That this position will be continued indefinitely, or the military or diplomatic situation as respects the strength of the two factions is still a matter of some uncertainty here.

Two Cases Forgotten

In the attention that has been concentrated on the battle of Torreon the Benton and Vergara cases have been practically lost sight of, but there is every indication that they will be over and when another readjustment of military forces ensues further information will be sought from both the Constitutionalists and the federalists. The Benton and Vergara cases are being pursued in satisfaction of injuries inflicted upon foreigners by their subordinates.

Hale in Europe

Just what Mr. Lind might do while in the United States after he has rested is causing a good deal of speculation, the suggestion being advanced in some quarters that perhaps he might make a trip to observe conditions in the United States. Where General Carranza is in control, for some time William Bayard Hale had advised the President to a large extent about the situation in Mexico, but his health failed him recently and he went to Europe to recuperate.

Administration officials are emphatic in their declaration that Mr. Lind's present mission is to observe conditions in the American policy. Charge O'Shaughnessy will continue at Mexico City to conduct any routine business that may arise, but he will not be in the line of duty.

In none of Mr. O'Shaughnessy's transactions, however, it is pointed out here, is formal recognition of the policy of the Washington government being dealt with with authorities in de facto control.

Refers to Conference

General Huerta had said in his message to the United States has been so good as to invite me, through his Excellency President Wilson, to organize in common accord the preparatory work of the conference.

The explanation of the statement is found in the fact that last February, when the purpose of removing what appeared to be a formidable technical obstacle to the carrying out of the original plan for the reassembling of the Hague conference was to be a formal declaration of the American diplomatic officers in every country which was a party to the original Hague conference.

Upon the assurance of Dr. E. J. Moore, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania, that the Woodfin's statements were correct and that the two organizations were friendly to the utmost degree, and upon his plea that the convention do not complicate matters by endorsing another State organization, the agitation began to subside, and after a few scattered remarks, Dr. Hull withdrew his substitute resolution which had been seconded by C. F. Swift, member of the Legislature from Beaver county. Dr. Moore said the Anti-Saloon League was already at work on the formation of a new department to aid no-license organizations.

Chairman Huston then put the question and a volume of ages rolled through the church. After the silence followed the calling for bids, a deep-voiced member struck up a hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and the morning session adjourned.

The precipitation of the vital topic before the meeting was by taking State-wide organization would be formed, made necessary the postponement of a symphonetic discussion of the subject.

The Relation of No-license Campaigns to Temperance and Other Sympathetic Organized Forces, which, however, was carried out this afternoon as follows:

Pittsburgh, general secretary Inter-church Federation; International Order Good Templars, Ellwood Nichols, Hamorton, Pa.; grand chief temple Pennsylvania Lodge, The Pennsylvania Grange, John A. McSparran, Lancaster county.

The sessions of the morning opened with an address on some important move to make secure proper anti-liquor legislation by C. F. Swift, Beaver county member of the State Legislature, which was followed by an address by Dr. Homer W. Topp, Philadelphia district superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who spoke on the apparent harmony that prevailed among the anti-liquor forces, and said that this meeting to-day was a notice that there is no division among the anti-liquor forces. The Rev. H. M. Chalfant, D. D., of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League, followed with a paper in which he said that the most important action in a whole nation-wide prohibition campaign was the winning of a step forward in Pennsylvania. He pointed out that the liquor forces must concentrate on one issue and urged that the issue to be presented this year before the Legislature and before the voters should be county local option.

Warm Discussion

It was at this point that R. A. Hutchison, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the board of home missions of the Philadelphia district, introduced a substitute resolution endorsing and urging co-operation with the anti-saloon league. Again the discussion raged, and here one of the women members of the Anti-Saloon League, Mrs. Morris T. Wood, of Downingtown, vice-president of the Women's Christian Temperance Alliance spoke winged words: "I am only a woman," she said, "and I think that a woman's place is not in the forefront of the battle. But it does seem that you men want to get together by having each one do his own part."

Reference by General Huerta in his message to the Mexican congress Wednesday to the action of the United States government in connection with the proposed reassembling of The Hague conference did not imply, in the view of the anti-saloon forces, any recognition to the Huerta government.

NO-LICENSE CAMPAIGNERS IN SESSION

Woodfin's introducing this report of the committee on resolutions of which he was chairman, a storm of protest arose. Dr. George W. Hull, of Millersville, vice-president of the Inter-county and Lancaster County No-License League, arose and said that the adoption of the resolution would convert the situation into a status-quo and that members would go back exactly as we came." The Rev. Mr. Johnson, pastor of a Philadelphia church, urged that a State-wide organization be formed. The dynamic utterance of a Potter county delegate along the same lines evoked a storm of applause. The Potter county delegate said he felt that the meeting had been called to organize one State-wide body, and that county delegates were the organization of anti-liquor forces was considerably weaker than in others would naturally expect to look to a State body for advice and counsel.

The Rev. Mr. Watchorn, another Philadelphia pastor, advanced the argument that a new organization was unnecessary. He said that its formation might breed jealousies among the other organizations.

AGED MOTHER'S LAST PLEA TO SAVE SON

From a little town 'way down in South Carolina yesterday came a plea for help to save a son from the gallows. Hall has been condemned to be hanged in the yard of the jail May 26 for the murder of W. H. Slater, a fellow negro of Steelton.

The last appeal was contained in a pathetic letter from Hall's aged white-headed mother to W. Justin Carter, chief counsel for the defense. In it Mrs. Hall hopefully declares that she has managed to put together $75 and will send this by the next mail. Mr. Carter thinks it will help to get her son's case before the Board of Pardons. Only between the lines is the story of the mother's toil and self-sacrifice to raise the money.

March Treasury Report.—City

figures for March were in excellent shape according to the report completed yesterday by Clerk Webber of the city treasury. During the month the receipts were $60,887.07 and the expenditures $87,474.44. About $25,000 worth of bonds were redeemed and some interest of $25,000 worth of other bonds were the principal items.

Plans and Specifications For Jail Changes.—Detailed plans and specifications for the proposed changing of the lower floor jail windows are on file in the county commissioners' offices for benefit of contractors. Copies

A WOMAN'S HEALTH

Every woman's health is peculiarly dependent upon the condition of her blood. How many women suffer with headache, pain in the back, poor appetite, weak digestion, a constant feeling of weariness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, pallor and nervousness? If you have any of the symptoms, do not despair of getting better but begin now, to-day, to build up your blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. See how the nervous energy of the body is restored as the blood becomes pure and red and the entire system is strengthened to meet every demand upon it.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are useful for all women but they are particularly valuable to girls of school age who show symptoms of going into a decline, who become pale, nervous and languid. These pills aid in securing perfect development and health by strengthening the system and purifying and building up the blood. Thin blood during the growing years of a girl's life usually means a flat-chested and hollow-cheeked womanhood. There can be neither health nor beauty without red blood which gives brightness to the eyes and color to cheeks and lips.
