Geisking, of 215 Emerald street. The wedding date is indefinite. The bride-elect, one of the most attractive of the younger girls of the city, is a granddaughter of the late Captain William J. George, for many years connected with the State Soldiers' Orphan Commission. She is a graduate of the Central High School, class of 1910. Mr. Geisking is an employe of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Last evening, Miss George entertained at a little dinner at her home, with cards following. The table appointments were of pink, with quaint chiffon shades for the candelabra. At each cover was a corsage bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas, and tucked away among the flowers were tiny cards bearing the names of Miss George and Mr. Geisking.

DR. COOVER DESCRIBES HOSPITALS OF ROME

Says He Has Not Yet Mastered Italian Trolley Fare System

Dr. Carson Coover, whose travel letters to the home folks are most interesting, has sent another section of his diary from Florence under date of March 29. He says in his latest letter that he appreciated the art treasures of Rome all the more because the sightseeing came as a pleasant interruption to his attendance at medical clinics. Dr. Coover has been visiting the hospitals of the old world and he speaks enthusiastically of what he has observed in medical and surgical practice. In one of the large hospitals in Rome there are 1,500 beds and all the patients pay $1.40 a day, or, if unable, the city pays the bill. There are no private rooms, that class of patients being treated in private hospitals. Dr. Coover describes the hygienic appointments of the hospital and the modern surgical facilities.

Dr. Coover goes directly from Venice to Vienna and he will also take a short excursion to Budapest. He says he has not fully solved the fare system of the Italian trolleys, but knows it is very cheap—two to five cents.

He says he found much of interest in a study of the psychologic features of the Monte Carlo community, but was not tempted to indulge in the play because, as he says, "the odds are strongly against the player, but it was fascinating to see all of these people risk their money in an attempt to get something for nothing."

He found the Bay of Naples most attractive and his first experience with the customs officers more or less exciting. He describes Naples as the city of joyful noise, but found Rome full of interest everywhere.

The annual report of the Guild for the year showed that cards and flowers had been distributed every Saturday morning. At Easter each patient received a potted flower and an Easter card. The wards were made bright and cheerful at Christmas time by Miss McCormick and Mrs. Stine. Each ward had a tree trimmed with tree ornaments, and holly wreaths and Christmas greens were used in the hospital and nurses' home. Each child in the children's ward received a toy and each patient a Christmas card. Magazines and books were supplied during the year.

Among the large gifts to the institution was that of $771.30 from the proceeds of the May Day fete. Other gifts of money from individuals, organizations and classes have been received, as well as donations of books, clothing for invalids and the large Thanksgiving offerings of food of all sorts.

After the departure of Miss Swank, superintendent for five years, it was decided to separate the duties of the management of the hospital and the training of nurses. Mr. Lindbad is now in charge of the hospital as superintendent, and Miss Gemmill as superintendent of nurses.

There are now in the training school twenty-seven nurses. Five nurses will complete their courses this year, and will become graduates of the Harrisburg Hospital Training School for Nurses.

The judge dismissed Long Tom, who said he had no other name.
