WILMINGTON
WILMINGTON, Ohio, April 8.—The inability of operators to sell coal from an overstocked market is the real cause for the closing down of the Ohio bituminous coal mines, according to William A. Green, secretary of the International Organization of the Mine Workers of America, who was here yesterday en route to Crooksville, Ohio, to attend a conference of miners in the Crooksville district.

Soon after President Wilson took office the negotiations were reopened and have been proceeding steadily to the conclusion reached yesterday at Bogota, when a treaty was signed.
