GARDENS URGED FOR ALL PEOPLE

Commissioner Dixon Gives Some Good Wholesome Advice to the General Public

Planting and attending to a garden are declared by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Commissioner of Health, to be excellent for the health and welfare of the average person and in one of his weekly talks on taking care of oneself the commissioner says that everyone who can do so should work a little in the garden.

Few know it, but Dr. Dixon is one of the successful farmers of the State. He owns a number of farms, including a large one near Philadelphia, and his management of it takes up a good bit of his time when he is home.

In speaking about the advantages of making a garden Dr. Dixon says: "Plant a garden. Some of the world's greatest thinkers have found diversion and inspiration in their gardens. If your control of agricultural space is limited to a 20-foot back yard, do not be discouraged. It is even possible to transform an unattractive flat roof into a garden.

The practical benefits derived from the tillage of a little garden are usually exceeded by the aesthetic, but in the hurly-burly of everyday life importance we weigh as too little importance our opportunity for the cultivation and appreciation of the beautiful. It is difficult to tell how far reaching may be the effect of some slight effort at beautification.

"Years ago a boy station agent of a railroad traversing the plains of the Canadian Northwest sent back home for a few packages of flower seed and with such time as he could spare transformed the surroundings of his mean little one-room station. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the road, was making a tour of inspection and when he reached this little garden spot in the then uncultivated wastes he asked to see the boy and learned from him the story of his garden. As a result the boy's garden was the road, which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific, received packages of seeds and instructions to plant flowers around every station, and the custom has been ever since continued.

The cultivation of twenty feet or more of back yard may not result in anything of this sort, but should prove a healthful, restful and profitable diversion after the labors of the day for the busy man or woman."

The Theater in New York

BY MYRON C. FAGAN.

Margaret Anglin Is Seen in "Lady Windermere's Fan"

One of the best of all the attractions on view in New York is Margaret Anglin's performance of Erylne Wilde's dramatic gem. As we all know, the role of Mrs. Erylne is one that might lead the average actress into an emotional display verging on hysteria. A mother who has played the game of life so badly as to cheat herself out of a daughter is a character likely to fill the actress who plays it with self pity.

Gaby Leslys the "Belle of Bond Street"

Recent activities have been exclusively to revivals, the Shubert theater being given over to Gaby Leslys and Sam Bernard, who appeared in a revised edition of "The Girl from Kays" now known as "The Belle of Bond Street."

First honors went to Bernard in his old role of Hogenheimer. He played the part with all the zest that he brought to it in the days when "sufficiency" was the byword in Broadway.

Gaby makes a beautiful "Belle" and is proving possession of real histrionic powers. Others in this revival are Harry Hester, Lawrence D'Orsay and Lottie Collins. But it was sputtering Sam Bernard and disdainful Gaby Leslys who carried "The Belle of Bond Street" into the highway of success.

Clyde Fitch's play which Mr. Ames is presenting at the Little Theatre, beginning this week, has probably been translated into more languages than any other American play. It has been given in practically every country of Europe and there are versions of it in German, French, Italian, Norwegian, Danish and Swedish. Mr. Fitch's first real London success was this play. It ran for a year in London where Marie Hempstead played the role allotted to Grace George in the present production.

Vitagraph Not to Establish Chain of Theaters

The recent convention of exhibitors in Cleveland, Ohio, emphatically condemned the manufacturers of film who entered into the exhibiting game, and, while no definite names were used, it very evidently was intended as a direct shot for the Vitagraph Company, which operates the Vitagraph Theater.

The Ohio exhibitors surely reckoned with little consideration, if such was the case, and it now seems that the many rumors to the effect that the Vitagraph Company was embarking in the exhibiting business on a large scale have been started, but are all unfounded. This is shown by an announcement from J. W. SWARTZ.

Announcement that "A Million Bid" and "Goodness Gracious" are being released to the public through the General Film Company. The Vitagraph Theater opened Saturday night, February 7, 1914, with the policy of four shows a day. The pictures displayed were "A Million Bid," a five-reel drama from the play "Agnes," by George Cameron (Mrs. Sidney Drew), and "Goodness Gracious," a three-reel comedy evolved principally by J. Stuart Blackton and staged and elaborated by James Young.

Shubert to Book Pictures New company formed with Joseph L. Rhinock as president will control long list of dramatic and musical plays. Announcement is made by the Shubert theatrical interests that a new company has been formed to be known as the Shubert Feature Film Booking Company for the purpose of booking motion pictures to be made for a long list of dramatic and musical comedy productions controlled by the Shuberts, W. A. Brady and other dramatic managers. The total number of plays thus made available for picture production approximates about two hundred, many of which are voted successes.

Joseph L. Rhinock is president of the new corporation, Jules Murray, manager, and Lou Weed the booking agent. J. E. Brulature and Ch. Johnson, of the Eclair Company, are said to be interested in the enterprise.

Work on productions for the new booking agency is now under way at the Eclair studio at Fort Lee and, unfortunately, some of the negatives were destroyed in the fire that burned the Eclair factory two weeks ago. But the plans for the new Eclair factory and studio are designed to take care of the large enterprise contemplated by the organization of the Shubert Feature Film Booking Company.

THE CHILDREN AND THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE BOY BLUE"

Eugene Field was tall and spare, though not ungainly. As an entertainer he was at his best in the pathetic passages of his own character sketches. He rendered these with marvelous effect upon his hearers.

Like Riley, whom he resembled strongly in many ways, he was an intense lover of children, and if there were any little ones about he was very apt to forsake the grown folks. To the children he was himself in all the exuberance of his own buoyant childhood. To them he sang songs they inspired in him, the soft, sweet lullabies to draw them to his own fairy-land imagination, and with them he romped and played with all the zest and abandon of his care-free soul.

One night we were the guests of a mutual friend, and while sitting in the drawing room Field, who had heard the voices of children in an adjoining room, quietly disappeared. Soon thereafter shouts of joy and peals of merriment rang through the house. Something unusually frolicsome had broken out among the children. What could it be? The door was opened and there was Field, in his dress suit, minus his coat, down on all fours, in the center of a group of excited children, all screaming with delight. Such a picture!

Field was in his element among the children. He was one of them. He played and romped and rolled on the floor and kicked up his heels in all the reckless abandon of a boy just out of school. He made grimaces, sang funny songs, told funny stories and mocked funny people. From the depths of his great heart he loved the children. And who loved him? "Riley, Nye and Field—Personal Notes and Recollections," Eugene V. Debs, in National Magazine for January, 1914.

RIVERSIDE FOLK TO TAKE UP ANNEXATION

The map herewith gives complete details of the area that it is proposed to admit to the city. Beginning from Division street the land runs to the Linglestown road. From the Susquehanna it goes eastward, taking in Wildwood Park and ending at the park limits. This section contains several thousand inhabitants and is already well built up in the part nearest to Harrisburg.

SHE SMOKES PIPE BECAUSE IT HELPS

market has closed," she says. "Yes, I like it now. Made me sick at first, but now I got so I like to have a puff. What kind of tobacco do I use? Well, not 'beggar's delight,' anyway. Oh, I change off. When I get tired of one kind I get another." Smokes Pipe for Company "Granny" has been coming to Harrisburg market for thirty-one years. In the summer she drives in, but of late years in the winter she takes a train. And for twenty of those years she has smoked. She explained how she started. Her husband was very ill with pneumonia and Mrs. Martin sat up night after night and all through the day to watch at his bedside. One night, in order to stay awake, she took her husband's pipe and smoked it. It made her half-sick, but had the desired effect, and during the vigil that succeeded "Granny" found the pipe a solace and a stimulant. So she became a pipe smoker, and now it forms one of the comforts of a rather lonely existence; for her husband, although he recovered from the particular attack of pneumonia which was responsible for sending "Granny" along the nicotine route, died several years ago. And every market day "Granny" may be seen at her stall. Before business begins she puffs her briar pipe and then lays it away; and after the business is over she again enjoys a smoke before departing for her home in York county.
