HOHL'S PAD AND RING STOLEN

Altoona Officials Will Not Take Chances of Bandit's Possible Return

Altoona, Pa., April 18.—For fear that Frank G. Hohli, the fugitive bank bandit, may come back and pull off another sensational stunt in this old town, a diamond ring and $500 in cash, taken from the bandit when he was lodged in jail, have been placed in a safe deposit vault.

The diamond is so large that it would make a headlight in a dark room; and the bank roll is large enough to make a Monte Carlo gambler jealous. These valuables were ordered removed from the office of Chief of Police James Tillard and placed in a safe, by Judge Thomas J. Balridge, and they have been turned over to Guy R. Linswelt, Prothonotary.

It was also learned to-day that Frank G. Hohli is not a stranger to Middle division officials, having at one time been an employe of the Middle division when headquarters were in Harrisburg.

A perusal of the Middle division pay rolls disclosed the fact that Hohli was his first employment in the Middle division telegraph office in 1901. His first job was given him by William H. Balsey, division operator of this city.

STEELTON MIDDLETOWN ENCHIPSIRE ROYALTON OBERLIN ENHOUT

GREEK CHURCH TO CELEBRATE EASTER

While the greater part of Christendom was gaily celebrating Easter Sunday just a week ago to-morrow there were many people scattered throughout the world who held aloof from the festivities.

Down in the little foreign settlement in the lower end of Steelton the members of St. Nicholas' Orthodox Church for days past have been busy preparing for to-morrow's festivities. On Friday a deep excavation was made in the rear of the church, in South Second street, to represent the sepulchre of Christ.

After this ceremony at the sepulchre is ended the procession will disband to celebrate the day in much the same manner as Easter was observed last Sunday. A concert by the Liberty band and a drill by the Croatian Sokol will be some of the high lights in the day's festivities.

Among the farmers Judge Kunkel is well remembered as the judge before whom the Capitol conspirators were convicted and sent to the penitentiary, and whose efforts led to the return of nearly two millions of stolen money to their rightful owners.

The petitions sent to the nonpartisan committee having in charge the Kunkel campaign were accompanied by letters from many friends of the Judge, in which they predict a sweeping victory for him at the May primary.

Nominating petitions descended on the State Capitol by the dozens to-day when the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth closed for the week at noon, baskets of papers were piled high awaiting examination as to number of signatures and affidavits.

Michael J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, candidate for Democratic nomination for Governor, and William Draper Lewis, candidate for Washington nomination for Secretary of Internal Affairs; Fred E. Lewis, Allentown, Washington, Secretary of Internal Affairs, and A. R. Rupley, Carlisle, Lex S. Mitchell, Punksutawney, and A. H. Waters, Johnstown, for Congress-at-large.

The composition of the Congress-at-large ticket was learned at the same time that State Representative John R. K. Scott announced his candidacy for Congressman-at-large. The "slate" will be: John R. K. Scott, Philadelphia county; ex-Congressman Daniel F. Lafean, York county; ex-Congressman Thomas S. Crago, Greene county; M. M. Garland, Allegheny county, ex-Surveyor of the Port of Pittsburgh.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 8.—Leonard Hough, 30 years old, a boiler-maker employed in the roundhouse of the Western Maryland Railway company at Hagerstown, committed suicide at his home at that place about 5 o'clock this morning.

Hough had gotten up this morning a little before 4 o'clock and went to a little of the electric wires, made a rope over a rafter, made a slip-noose, adjusted it about his neck and then kicked a box from beneath his feet. His body was discovered by his wife shortly after and was still warm when found, but life was extinct.

STREET WALLS AND OTHERS BARRICADED

Declares With Shakespeare That Good Buttermilk Needs No Press Agent

Irwin, Pa., April 18.—A headlong plunge down a hill and a tangled wind-up at the bottom were the thrills yesterday in the day's life of the Telegraph's stillwalker, F. E. Wilvert.

As once before on his remarkable trip, Wilvert this time escaped injury to the stout stills and rolled from bruises. His stout stills also remained unbroken. When he took the plunge Wilvert managed to swerve to the side and rolled like a barrel for a considerable distance.

Wilvert got into town at 8 o'clock last night and received considerable of an ovation. He stopped at the hotel and drank about a quart of M. J. McGowan's good buttermilk, which is brought down every day from up the hill by a buttermilk specialist. Wilvert quoted Shakespeare as he drank the first drop, remarking: "Good wine needs no bush, and good buttermilk no press agent."

A deep silence in the bar followed this remark, and then the crowd gave up the attempt to get the king who soon after retired, or, as we say up here, went to bed.
