Does Your Sweetheart Drink
Read These Letters From Heartbroken Girls and Take Heed!

By Beatrice Fairfax.

If the little God of Love wore any garments to which a badge could be pinned there would be fastened to his coat a little white ribbon bow indicating that he is on the side of those opposed to every form of intoxicating liquor, for he comes quickest, stays longest and is truest to those whose habits and lives are decent and clean. And this, I am quite sure, may never be said of the man who drinks. This is in answer to the following letters:

Heartbroken writes that she is sixteen and engaged to a young man years her senior. "He claims he is me and always treats me affectionately, but he has a habit of going as far as three days at a time, then we become engaged he promises to give up liquor, but soon went back drinking again. Would you advise me to marry him?"

Sophie says: I am desperately in love with a man years younger than I am. I have been acquiring bad habits, and very effort on my part to cure him has failed. He claims he loves me wildly, but I love him too much to give up my life. Can you suggest any method by which I can cure him? I have brought on mine."

quickest, stays longest and is truest to those of decent habits and lives, bears no weight with these foolish girls, let the following letter bear its share of the "root that to marry a man who drinks is suicidal folly."

"When I was sixteen years of age I met and married a man of twenty-eight after an acquaintance of only three weeks. I did not know what I was doing, or only knew that I loved him, but I have found out since what a crime it is against happiness to marry a man of whom one knows nothing. I found out within a few weeks after my marriage that he was a drinking man, and have suffered every humiliation a woman may know in my life with him for twenty-five years. We have five living children, and though he professes to love them and me, he has never given up drink for my sakes. I find that I cannot bear the touch of his hand, and that my disgust grows greater every day I am with him until it seems sometimes that I will go mad with my hatred and loathing for him. Perhaps you can help me, but I doubt it. I have no one to go to, no way of making a living, and must stand his abuse till the day of my death, or become a burden on the homes of others. I write this letter in the hope that some girl who loves a man who drinks may read it and want to tell her that the man who loves liquor loves it more than he loves any woman, or home, or life itself. I want her to know that no promise given in a whiskey-soaked breath is ever kept. I want her to give up such a man before she calls down on her head the life-long suffering I have brought on mine."

War Will Be Trial of Woe, Says Taft

New Haven, Conn., April 20.—Twenty-five hundred Yale students took part last night in a spontaneous demonstration favoring war with Mexico. Ex-President William Howard Taft, President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale, and Secretary Stokes addressed the men, who marched to their homes and called for speeches on the war.

Professor Taft said: "There are a great many circumstances which may yet prevent war. Every lover of his country ought to pray that this national calamity may be averted."

"A high authority has estimated for me that it would take from 300,000 to 500,000 men a long time to subdue Mexico. I have had four years of experience in a country not dissimilar to Mexico. War in Mexico would be guerilla warfare. It would be a long and bloody struggle."

"War with Mexico will be no trail of glory—it will be a trail of woe. Not one of you, when you look back at it after it was over, would welcome it. I hope you will meet with a stern determination to meet your responsibility. Gentlemen, I hope God may avert war."

The demonstration started on the campus. The gathering crowd later marched to the house of the Secretary Stokes, who said he hoped "if there was war it would be speedy." Guns were shot off, a bugle sounded a charge for the column up the steep hill to Professor Taft's house and the students sang "Damn, Damn, Damn the Insurrectos" and "Yankee Doodle." The Yale football song, "Princeton, Good Night," was sung with the line changed to "Mexico, Good Night."

Senator Chamberlain Asks $50,000,000 Appropriation

Washington, D. C., April 20.—A bill to appropriate $50,000,000 to be expended by the President was introduced by Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the military affairs committee, to which the bill was referred.

The Chamberlain bill provides that the President of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized to expend in his discretion, for the national defense and for each and every purpose connected therewith, the sum of $50,000,000 out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall remain available until expended.

This is identical to the bill passed before the war with Spain.

Pensacola, Florida, April 20.—Orders were received early to-day directing the fleet of twenty torpedo boat destroyers here to put to sea this afternoon, meeting Rear Admiral Badger's fleet in the Gulf and accompanying it to Tampico. PRESIDENT WILSON TELLS OF SITUATION sailors had no right to land there. Our naval commander at the port had not been notified of this prohibition and, even if they had been, the only justifiable course open to the local authorities would have been to request the paymaster and his crew to withdraw and to lodge a protest with the commanding officer of the fleet. Admiral Mayo regarded the arrest as so serious an affront that he was not satisfied with the apologies offered, but demanded that the flag of the United States be saluted with special ceremony by the military commander of the port.

INCIDENT NOT TRIVIAL
"The incident cannot be regarded as a trivial one, especially as two of the men arrested were taken from the territory of the United States, where it stood by itself, it might have been attributed to the ignorance or arrogance of a single officer. Unfortunately, it was not an isolated case. A series of incidents have recently occurred which cannot but create the impression that the representatives of General Huerta were willing to go out of their way to show disregard for the dignity and rights of this government and felt perfectly safe in doing what they please, making free to show in many ways their irritation and contempt."

OPEN NEGOTIATIONS FOR SUBWAY EARTH

Commissioner Lynch Will Take Up Question as Soon as Bidder Is Determined

Negotiations for acquiring the 150,000 tons of excavated earth from the Front and Second street subways for "fill" along the River Front between Maclay and Division streets, will be opened by City Commissioner W. H. Lynch, superintendent of streets and public improvements, as soon as the contract has been let by the railroad company.

"Pennsylvania Railroad officials this morning advised me that they did not yet know to whom the contract for building the subways was to be let," said Commissioner Lynch to-day, "but as soon as I learn who is to be let, in the bidding I shall open negotiations with the view of getting the earth for the city's use."

"The chance is one that we will not have again in years, the material will be just what we need, the earth will be in quantities that will be feasible and practicable for us to take," went on the Commissioner. "All that we'll need will be the expenditure of some money to pay for the hauling of the earth from the region of the proposed improvement to the River Front above Maclay street. This, of course, is a long haul, and just what it will cost, I'm not able to say as yet. We will try to get the dirt at as reasonable rates as possible, and I will certainly advise taking advantage of any opportunity."

"The contractor could dump the excavated earth on the lands south of Paxton street and along the tracks, and I suppose this possibility will be figured upon by the contractor in view of the fact that a very short haul will be involved—merely a question of taking the teams over the Paxton street bridge. But I think that if the city can get this earth at anything like a reasonable figure for hauling, it would be a practicable and economical thing to do."

Madame Ise'bell Writes of Cold Baths and Their Effect on the Complexion

A correspondent writes asking me if I do not think cold baths bad for the complexion and cites the fact that English women who habitually use them are apt to have rough and over-red skins towards middle age.

I certainly do not think a quick, cold plunge in the morning bad for the complexion; on the contrary, if it agrees with the physique, it is sure to agree with the skin. Women with thick, scaly skins need a quickening of the circulation and this is best effected by the cold bath if one gets the proper reaction. If the skin looks rosy and there is a feeling of warmth and well being throughout the body, such a bath is a good thing; if, on the other hand, the cheeks are purple and there are symptoms of a chill, the temperature of the bath should be raised. There are other reasons besides the cold bath that explain why English women who have such lovely complexions in youth become too high colored as years go on. It is because the skin itself is cruelly neglected.

The average Englishwoman is a Spartan in matters of the toilet, and, compared to American women, or to the women of any other civilized country, spends a small part of the family income on herself. The moist climate of England and the athletic life led by all its young people is responsible for a race of rosy cheeked, strong limbed girls, but these charms neglected cease with youth.
