PENNSYLVANIA IN FIRST MEXICAN WAR

Commonwealth Sent More Than 2,000 Troops; Quota Now Ten Times That Number

In the event of war with Mexico, Pennsylvania's quota, under the first call for 250,000 volunteer troops would be 21,538—nearly 20,000 more than was sent to the invasion of the Southern Republic in 1846. Volume 10 of the Pennsylvania Archives, sixth series, contains the names of 2,030 volunteers. This is not complete, but it is approximately correct.

The State gave a good account of itself in that struggle, and there are a few survivors still residents of this Commonwealth. One of these survivors, Walter Meyers, was married only two years ago.

Captain Francis J. Keffer was president of the Mexican War Association, of Philadelphia, for many years. At the beginning of the present year there were 1,142 Mexican War pensioners who saw service and 5,125 widows. There has been paid out on account of the Mexican War to date $4,232,572.43 in pensions.

The Pennsylvania troops who left home sixty-eight years ago had no opportunity to become acquainted with travel de luxe. They would have regarded a train as a luxury, and as for present up-to-date khaki uniforms, looking to the comfort of the soldier in warm weather, they had not been invented. Most of the troops were ordered to Pittsburgh, where they were embarked on all sorts of watercraft from stern-wheel steamboats to flats, and taken down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to Camp Jackson, New Orleans. From there they were transported to Tampico by sailing vessels, and not a particularly pleasant feature of the voyage was a sale encountered as they reached the Mexican coast, a sale in which the transports to sea, where they rolled in the Gulf of Mexico for several days.

Officers in the Service With the two regiments of Pennsylvania troops were 94 officers, including Colonel John W. Geary, who was wounded at Chapultepec, but who lived to command a brigade at Gettysburg in the Civil War. Colonel Geary was one of Buchanan's appointees as Governor of Kansas during the border troubles.

A roster of the volunteer officers from Pennsylvania in the Mexican War follows:

First Regiment

Colonel—Francis M. Wyncoop. Lieutenant-Colonel—Samuel W. Black.

Major—Francis L. Bowman. Surgeon—John C. Reynolds. Assistant Surgeon—Thomas C. Bunting.

Adjutant—Alexander Brown. Captains—John Bennett, Frederick W. Binder, William A. Charleton, Edmund L. Dana, James O'H. Denny, Alexander Hay, John Herron, Joseph Hill, T. C. Moorehead, James Nagle, Robert K. Scott, W. F. Small.

First Lieutenants—W. J. Ankrim, John F. Baller, Sullivan D. Breece, W. A. M. Briggs, Alexander Brown, Abia Ferguson, William H. Gray, Aquila Hainstock, Augustus Larraneta, Simon S. Nagle, William Trevillo, Montgomery P. Young.

Second Lieutenants—Casper W. Berry, Adam Bucher, Isaac C. Brown, William Bryan, Ed. Carroll, William Clinton, James A. Deary, Norvin H. Goff, Joseph M. Hall, Henry Hunter, Franklin B. Kaercher, Ed C. Lewis, W. F. Mann, George Moore, Edward Rehr, John Ibsant, Frederick Seidenstricker, Lewis Voltair, Jacob Waelder, Robert Woods.

Second Regiment

Colonels—John W. Geary and William H. Roberts. Lieutenant—Colonel—William Brindle.

Surgeon—Frederick W. Miller. Assistant Surgeon—A. M. Cassidy. Adjutants—Benjamin F. Dutton and Isaac Waterbury.

Captains—James Caldwell, Clarence H. Frick, Charles H. Heyer, John Humphreys, John W. Johnston, Thomas S. Loesser, Alex. McKaney, James Miller, James Murray, Charles Naylor, Lewis W. Smith, Samuel M. Taylor, Edward C. Williams and John S. Wilson.

First Lieutenants—James Armstrong, Samuel Black, John A. Doyle, H. A. Hambricht, Edward E. Le Clerc, Charles McDermitt, Peter H. McWilliams, William Rankin, John Sturgeon, William Williams, Hiram Wold and William Wunder.

Second Lieutenants—Charles Bower, James Coulter, Bivan R. Davis, Richard Erwin, John G. Given, D. H. Hoffins, James Kone, John Keefe, Edmund Kline, Robert Klotz, Christian W. Loeb, Richard McMichael, James McKean, Jr., Joseph L. Madson, Washington Murray, Peter S. Reed, W. P. Skelly, Stewart Speers, Jacob F. Sperry, A. S. Tourison, David J. Wagner.

General Robert Patterson, of Pennsylvania, was the senior major general of volunteers in this war. He was commended for gallantry and for military strategy.

He was also a major general at the outbreak of the Civil War, but was so strongly censured after first Manassas (Bull Run) that his usefulness was destroyed. It was charged that if he had been more active he could have prevented the junction Johnston's army with the Confederates at the critical period of the battle.

Gave Country Two Presidents The last war with Mexico gave to the country two Presidents—General Zachary Taylor and General Franklin Pierce although it cannot be said of the latter that he made his reputation in the field. He was nominated, however, as a matter of expediency against General Winfield Scott, whom the Whigs selected as their standard-bearer in 1852.

Captain Charles P. Meek, of this city, has an interesting souvenir of the war with Mexico in the form of a diary kept by his father, the late Ephraim G. H. Meek, who enlisted at Carlisle barracks in the Indian School and served throughout the war period as a sergeant. It gives the movements of Sergeant Meek's company from the day it left until the day it returned and was mustered out of the service.
