

PENROSE DEMANDS BUSINESS SAFETY

Asks That Attacks and Harassment of Business by Administration Cease

Special to The Telegraph. Pittsburgh, April 28.—Declarations that harassing attacks on business must cease were made by Senator Penrose at the American Club dinner last night and cheered to the echo.

Senator Penrose in part said: "Probably in no other country in the world in time of peace has the business, commercial and industrial system received the rude assaults and attacks to which our American business, commercial and industrial system has been exposed. It is even doubtful whether in ordinary civilized warfare business could have been more ruthlessly shaken. It is extraordinary that we have survived and that the country is even enjoying a measure of prosperity."

"Not only has much been done already to undermine the foundations of prosperity, but the uncertainty as to what may be in store tends still further to retard and curtail all enterprise. Confidence is absent."

"We are having too much government from Washington. Congress has presented to it more bills at each session than a generation could dispose of. We are suffering from excessive legislation and we are not governed by a majority of the people."

"The Senator then reviewed the method of amending the Constitution, each State having one vote, and showed that five large States have a larger voting population than thirty-six that might amend the Constitution to the serious disadvantage of the whole people."

"Continuing, he among other things said: "We were assured before the last presidential election by the leaders of the party now in power, and by the standard-bearer of that party especially, that no legitimate business interest would suffer in the revision of the tariff. So great had been our prosperity, and for so long a period had it endured, that the majority of the electors forgot the experience of the past prior to 1896. It was the general opinion among the heads of industries and among the employes that the foundations of our industrial greatness were so deeply laid that no ordinary adverse legislation could choke or undermine them."

"Lulled into a sense of security by the assurances of political leaders, the great Republican party, under which the country had reached such a height of prosperity, became disoriented, the time being and the Democratic party was again restored to power without any great amount of apprehension. The desire which always prevails for a change contributed to the result."

"New Tariff a Menace. "Notwithstanding the pre-election assurances, however, the country soon awoke to the fact that the tariff was being revised upon very radical free trade lines and with a strong sectional bias; and we are now realizing an industrial depression, not sudden and precipitate, as has happened often heretofore under like conditions, but as sure and as steady in its progress as its destructive course as the descent of a glacier on the mountain side."

"Innumerable investigations have introduced an espionage into every business house and every corporation office such as hardly would have been tolerated in the darkest days of Russian despotism."

"A multitude of bills are pending in Congress regulating and curtailing in every conceivable way and degree the activities of business. Some of them are part of the plans of the Democratic majority controlling the government for enactment into law. Much legislation is inevitable, and the uncertainty of more to come has nearly paralyzed enterprise in the United States to-day."

"In closing an eloquent tribute to Grant, Senator Penrose said: "How fortunate it was for the Republic to have, at a time which seemed to be its death agony, a commander

McDEVITT SURPRISES THE FIRSTNIGHTERS

He is a Monologist of No Mean Ability and Keeps Things Moving All the Time

"Butch" McDevitt was a hobo, a "traveling man," he terms it. "Butch" McDevitt was a millionaire for a day.

The Orpheum bill, as a whole is good this week. Dunbar's band of nine men is perhaps the best musical act of its kind seen here for a long time.

LANDING HOUSE AT 132 S. THIRD ST.

Not Even Old-Timers Will Venture to Say Exactly When It Was Built

Upon tearing away a shell of lathes and plaster that had been superimposed upon the substantial old structure below it, workmen preparing for the construction of a three-story building for the Harrisburg Auto Tire Repair Company at 137 South Third street, came upon an old-time log house.

The discovery has caused considerable comment in the neighborhood, but not even the old-timers, who remember the structure very well say just how long it has been here. One story in height and built of very thick and heavy logs chunked up with mud, and the building remained moved from its present surroundings would serve very well as a dwelling place; at least it would afford perfect protection from wind and rain.

According to the old-timers there is another building in this neighborhood, in Cherry alley, just around the corner which is now occupied by Rheaum and Wenrich, blacksmiths, and is to be replaced by a bakery for N. M. Lamberth.
